Preparing Poultry for Market.

As almost every farmer has more or less poultry to sell, and many have enough to Agent for the following well known and reliable Insurwarrant them in preparing and sending it ance Companies : the subject of preparing poultry for market, may not be amiss. The increased price of nice, well picked and fattened poultry; over lean, or torn and pin-feathery "critters, richly repays the extra trouble required to put them in good order.

The dung-hill fowls or turkeys, or whatever kind of poultry is on hand, should not Bills receivable U. S. 5-20 Bonds Temporary and call Loans 103 shares Wyoming Bank Stock 50 shares Pirst Nat. weight of the other. They may be killed by cutting the vein across the roof of the mouth, and hanging them by the legs until done bleeding. Some make a practice of striking them a heavy blow on the head, before they are done bleeding, so as to retain the blood and weigh more, but it is an unprofitable prac-

After killing, the next thing is scalding and picking the feathers. None should be scalded until the moment of picking, and the water for scalding should not be too hot, nor too cool, but "just right." Experi-ence is the rule to tell when it is just right. The picking should be done with care, removing the wing and tail feathers first, while the bird is hot and they pull easy.—

If properly scalded there will be little danger with the greater part; some, however, will tear, be you ever so careful. All blood and dirt on the skin should be taken off, so that the bird be clean, and then it should be held a few seconds in boiling water. This will not injure it. but rather benefit, by hardening the skin and giving it a better color.

Some remove the heads before packing; but I am doubtful if the poultry will com-mand a higher price after so doing, if the bodies are in good order. The practice with us is to pack with head and legs still attached.

They should not be packed until through ly cooled; and it is advisable to let them lie one night after picking, for this purpose. Then they should be packed in a clean box with clean straw between them and the bottom and sides of the box. Laying them on their breasts in packing is the best position. After filling the box, cover with straw and nail on the cover, and the box is ready for shipping or "railroading," as the case

With respect to time of sending to market, it is well to keep posted on the prices, and then choose as cool a day as possible for sending in, if the price is satisfactory. A cool day is best, because the poultry will bear exposure in market better than on a PUTNAM INSURANCE COMPANY, warm day.

Heavy Farm Implements.

Now if the error was confined wholly to the use of heavy implements, handled by the man himself, then he alone could suffer by a useless outlay of strength; but it is not so, because as a general thing, farm carts and wagons are much too heavy.--Most of them are of sufficient weight to hold up thrice the burden that any common team should draw. Many horses and oxen are injured annually by this defect; for it is apt to be the case, that farmers are governed more by what their wagon will hold up, Nagara Insurance Company, when putting on a load, than they are by Capital what their teams should be allowed to draw. what their teams should be allowed to draw.

There are, of course, cases in which it is New England Insurance Company.

Philadelphia, there is certainly much less outlay of muscular power by both man and beast .-Wherever a man is found that daily exerts the strength of his team to the uttermost, is surely to be found one that is constantly perplexed with breakages, and the owner of a jaded team. Farmers, use light tools yourselves, and provide for your teams light and durable vehicles; there will be less wear and tear, and more accomplished.

Making Stock Comfortoble,

It is for the interest of every farmer to see that his stock are comfortably provided for, which consists not merely in housing and feeding them well, as this may be well controlled the consideration of the consideration of the consists of the consis surely to be found one that is constantly and faithfully done, and still an animal may be uncomfortable-for want of pure water, sufficient air, proper cleanliness,&c., all of which conditions are essential to its well being. No matter how slight the inconvenience, or neglect may seem, so long as an animal is made uncomfortable, it will not thrive as well, nor be as well fitted to labor, nor in the case of milch cows, be as productive in milk, as would be the case, where the cause or causes of discomfort removed. To realize the most profit from keeping stock, every condition necessary to their comfort should be secured and maintained. An animal poorly housed, if ever so well fed, will fail to give a satisfactory return in growth and flesh for the amount of food consumed.

Stock should be comfortably provided for, as a matter of economy, setting aside every other consideration. When animals are supplied with an abundance of the best quality of hay and grain, the bad effects arising from neglect in other particulars, arising from neglect in other particulars, will not be as easily perceived, as when in connection with the same neglect, they are poorly fed, although there is a loss to the owner in the first instance often-times, from the excess of food consumed, which under different management might have been saved; but when the fodder on hand is either deficient in quantity or inferior in quality, as it often is, the utmost care and judgment need to be exercised in feeding, to maintain stock in good condition, and to maintain stock in good condition, and to maintain stock in good condition. maintain stock in good condition, and to make them a source of profit. Variety in feeding should always be carried out as much as possible, as anything calculated to determine the maintain stock in good condition, and to make them a source of profit. Goods at a fair price are cheaper than poor goods at any price. All goods sold at one price, no bantering nor teasing to make an offer, but every one gets the same goods at the same price, which is the bottom of the market. All old goods marked down to the gold base, and will be sold regardlessjof sacrifice. If you want good goods at a fair price,
go to EDDY'S,
where you will find
him ready to show his goods and sell them too at the lowest figare to correspond with Gold. Bear in mind the place to buy good, well made, reliable
