Original Poetry. A MEMORY.

VOLUME XXVII.

Sweet breath of summer pinks Dainty and rare ; Sweet song of summer birds On the still air

Fields red with clover blooms, Mist-curtained hills, Low-breathing southern winds Soft flowing rills.

Dear sights and pleasant sounds, Beautiful day, With life's most holy things Folded away,

Stay, memory calls ye forth From the dead years. Stay, for my eyes are filled

With happy tears. I was but a little child, yet

I feel it now. My mother's loving kiss On my young brow

> Wherefore from the rest is set This day apart? Wherefore is its sweetness kept Deep in my heart? SYBIL PARK CULVER.
