LE GIGALTIONANT STORY

A his lecture in New York, on Equatorist Africa, M. Du Chaillu told the following big ant story as a self The Bashikonsy, ante may well be called the lords of the forest. It is the most voracious creature, I ever ever met. It is the dread of all living animals, from the leopard to the smallest insects. It is their habit to march through the forest in a long! regular line, a line about two inches broad and often several miles in length; all along this line are larger with, who act as officers—stand outside the ranks, and keep this singular army in order. If they come to a place where there are no trees to shelter them from the sun, whose heat they cannot bear, they immediately build an underground tunnel, through which the whole army pass in columns to the forest beyond.

When they grow hungry, as by a sudden command, the long line spread itself through the forest, advancing. forward, attacking and devouring all living things with a fury that is quite irresistible. The elephant and gorilla fly before them; the black men ron away ; every animal that lives in their line of march is chased..... In an incredible short space of time those that are caught are overwhelmed, killed, eaten, and only the bare ekcleton remains. They seem to hat matitutinal hour for an argument, asented.

> A STAIRLESS House.—There is now staircase, the place of that hitherto necessary means of access being supplied by a hydraulic elevator, ascending and descending noistlessly every minute. By means of this the lodgers will reach their respective floors speedily and without effort, at any given minute of day or night. Another advantage of this arrange ment is that it enables houses to be built to a much greater height/the upper floors being as easily accessile as the lower, and for that matter preferable, on account of better air, light and freedom from intrusion or the noises of the street. The tenement house building in Paris will be eleven stories high from the street level.
