This is the time when weeds ripen now, if properly directed, may save a days' work next season. Clear out the weeds from the corn and potato fields, therefore, cost what it will, and it will save expense in the end; of FINEST HEARSE all slovenly practices, by far too common among us, that of letting the weeds overtop the potatoes and ripen, and shed their seeds on the land, the worst. You may mark the good and the bad farmer by it as certainly

. as in any other way. After having comes a period of comparative leisure on most farms.— There is a time for a little draining, ditching, cutting bushes and other similar improvements. Many swamp or wet meadow may now be taken in hand and brought into cultivation. and a lot of material for the compost heap, or cow-yard, thrown out, and be put in the way of preparation for use. No thrifty farmer will neglect to provide the proper material for adding to the fertility of his land. If muck is perfectly dried, it will hold about nine-tenths of its own weight of liquid manure. The most important work for August is the preparation of the ground for fall seeding. Summer fallows are to be worked, and stubble grounds plowed; the latter should be turned over as soon as possible after being cleared of grain. Time is wanted for weeds to start before the final working preceding the sowing, and it is better to let the soil receive the good effects of the air, sun and rain, and become light and pulverized before the seed is deposited in it. At least the stubble should be well harrowed

It has been frequently ascreed that properly underdrained subsoiled ands never suffer from drouth. Who cannot name many farmers who lose their crops from drouth, at least once in ten years, and still have never experimented to know whether they can underdrain and subsoil their land for one-tenth the value of their crops or whether such subsoiling and underdraining will save them from drouth entirely? And those who doubt this fact, should they not make the experiment, or visit the farms of those who have, to know of its truth !

It is thought, by the most of far-mers, that the only way to have a good meadow is to plow up, and seed down every three or four years; but this is a mistaken idea, as meadows, if the soil is not of a very light loam, will improve by age for a number of years, if treated in a proper manner which is to pasture as little as pos sible, top-dress with plaster, at the rate of 200 pounds to the acre once in two years; use barnyard manure as a top-dressing, at the rate of fifteen loads to the acre, which should be applied in the month of October: A meadow that has been treated in this manner, has been mowed six seasons, and has a better sward on, and a better prospect for a good crop this year than it has had for any time since it was seeded; and had a better crop of hay on it last season than for several years previous.
