accustomed to teach their children that pumpkins are pistillate and staminate, or male and female; and that the female pumpkin should always be saved for seed. The female pumpkin, it was said, always has a much larger calyx, than the male, on the end opposite the stem end. Be this as it may, when they observed this rule in saving seeds, their crops far excelled the yield of their neighbors who succeed at and ignored this rule. In numerous localities, potatoes should be dug in September. The true way to save seed is, to select the fairest, most perfect and best, when the tubers are dug. When potatoes are spread out on the ground, the eye will detect, at a glance, which tuber should be saved for seed. In potatoes that have not been badly injured by selling the best and eating the next best, and planting the culls, there will be, in almost every hill, one or two fair and healthy tubers-more so than the rest-which nature designed for seed. Such tubers should be selected with great care and kept by themselves for future seed.

Young fruit trees of all kinds require attention, to prepare the tender branches for winter. Every twig and branch that has not ceased to grow by the 20th of this month, should be checked by pinching off the ends of the vigorous branches. The object is to induce the new wood to harden before freezing weather comes on, as intense cold will prove fatal to young and tender bushes and vines that continue to grow late in the season.

Sowing winter grain is one of the items of farm labor for this month ex cept south of New York. There is such a thing as sowing winter wheat too early as well as to late in autumn. Yet, seed wheat is seldom put in too carly. The aim should be to sow, or drill in the seed sufficiently early, in autumn, that the tender plants may send out strong roots, and form leaves sufficiently large to cover the surface of the ground. If the land be rich, mellow, and sufficiently moist to insure immediate germination, better not to put in the seed till nearly the first of October. On the contrary, it the ground is only in an ordinary state of fertility, and not very mellow and moist, it will be better to put in the seed by the tenth of September. If the soil is at all inclined to be wet, better drain it, plow and fertilize it thoroughly, and put in spring wheat next season, than to attempt to raise half a crop of winter grain.

It is a good time now to prepare new flower beds. Flowers like vegetable mould. Remove a portion of the stubborn and heavy soil, and worksin a bountiful dressing of mould from the forest, or swampy ground, which is now dry.

Socibility among Farmers.

Naturally a farmer is an unselfish man. His labors are mostly out of doors, His calling takes him much abroad, and enables him to mingle considerably with the world. Yet looking at the very large proportion of the population embraced in his pursuit, and the important influence exercised by it over all our public affairs, it is a subject of common remark, even by agriculturists them-selves, that their social intercourse should be so much restricted. There is no other cause for this seclusive. TEAS, COFFEES, SUGAR ness than the "treading in the footsteps of their predecessors." Be this : it may, there are other causes operating which appear to be changing for the better. Country fairs, bringing agriculturists together from dis tricts sufficiently near to each other to-make acquaintanceship pleasant and lasting, and putting them in friendly emulation in matters and things involving their agrestic skill and success, are clearly working to form more close companionships between those whose domestic comforts and family enjoyments must be greatly promoted in the future. Little clubs among the farmers of a neighborhood, to meet once a week, to discuss or talk over the innumerable subjects connected with the intelligent prosecution of their noble profession, produce a decidedly fraternizing effect. While the local associations should not be too formal and restricted, they should have an official organization as better calculated to cause punctuality at the meetings, as well as to add to their permanency. On these occasions the wives and daughters of families should always accompany their husbands, fathers or brothers-not to participate of course in the proceedings that may take place, but to increase the agreeability of the meetings, and to share in the pleasure of these delightful interchanges of good neighborhood. Indeed, if the truth must be spokenand we are ready to do it upon, all occasions, especially upon such a one as this—there is very little social eniovment in the world which is not refined and made doubly enjoyable by TO. OF O.F.-BRADFORD LODGE the presence of women.
