Agricultural.

Hints About Work.

Buildings.—It is of prime importance that the fair weather of the early part of this month should be employed to put the farm buildings and their surroundings in good order for winter, and it is well to be a little ahead with such work. Go carefully over old buildings, tightening weather boards, renewing eaves troughs and spouts. Clear surface ditches, to keep water out of the barn yards, and away from the foundations. Roofs may be temporarily patched without much, if any, nailing, by simply driving shingles here and there between the coursed to carry water over actual holes. Old roofs are often more damaged than benefitted by mending, unless it is very thoroughly done. A little careless hammering and nail driving will split shingles and start nails, and open more holes than it closes.

Roads that are to be used during the winter must be put in order before frost; the stones picked off, gravel or earth put on where they have washed, good side drainage made,—on both sides, if possible,—the surface well rounded to turn water, and to make easy turn-offs for the wash that follows the wheel tracks down the hills.

Bridges.—If the rains and freshets have moved stones in the brooks and runs, and deposited an unusual amount of gravel anywhere, it will most likely be where they are contracted to pass through bridges or culverts. These should be carefully examined and cleaned out, for when ice forms, and an unusual flow of water comes, serious damage may result. It is more important that there should be a chance for water to flow off rapidly in passing and after passing a bridge, than that it should have easy access; a single stone will dam up a stream greatly.

Grain Fields.—In plowing furrows to carry off surface water, where this may be necessary, take care that their direction is such that they will not collect too much, wash deep gullies, and thus do more harm than good.

Draining.—So long as we do not have real winter weather, the work of underdraining may be pushed forward. It is more important to keep well up with the tile laying, for we may be caught by heavy freezing rains and snow-storms, and so all work be stopped suddenly.

Manure.—Bring in all muck sods, surface paringe, forest soil, and leaves that you can, to be used in composts, and lay up good even heaps of these materials, alternated with stable manure, in layers, using at least twice as much vegetable mould in whatever form you have it, as of the stable manure. The compost heaps should be of assorted materials, all, of course, vegetable matter, like potato tops and swamp grass, or other long litter, put together with a sufficiency of manure to make the whole ferment, or leaving the nitrogenous stable manure out, and adding instead freshly dry slaked lime, or wood ashes, at the rate of about one bushel to the cart-load. Composts of coarse, porous, materials, not made with lime or ashes, should stand over a sunken hogshead or other vat for cotaining liquid. This should be pumped every few days over the heap, and allowed to run back again to the vat, which should be supplied with water if there is any lack. In all composts, hog manure goes further than that of the horse, which is much more powerful in starting and maintaining fermentation than that of milch cows and young cattle, but hardly equal to that of fattening cattle or well fed oxen.

Fences.—We cannot too strongly present the evils of bad fences. The freezing and thawing of winter will almost surely develope the weak spots in old lines of fences, and breachy cattle will be sure to find them, if they are allowed either in the highway or in the fields. Grain fields are a strong attraction. The fences, therefore, should be looked to, weak posts staked up or renewed, sound rails or boards put in place of failing ones, and all secured against cattle, wind, and frost.

Horses, if well fed, enjoy cold weather. Although they show a natural preference for the sheltered side of the barn-yard, they seldom manifest any dislike to exposure to severe cold, unless they have been blanketed, and habituated to warm stables.—When horses are warm, always blanket them, either in stables or in the open air; take care that they are exposed to no draughts. When cooled off, remove the blanket. Carriage horses, which it is desirable should have a shiny coat, may wear linen covers buttoning round the breast, and having a crooper attached. Give good daily grooming, plenty to eat, water regularly, provide good ventilation, and let the sunlight into the stable.

Beeves.—Feed freely, but uniformly, all they will eat with relish changing character of the feed according to your judgment, if there be any failure of appetite. Keep salt always before them or accessible. Prepare the feed in another apartment from the one in which the cattle stand, and be punctual to the minute in feeding. In increasing the amount of grain or oil-meal, do it gradually, watching the effect. Use the card and brush freequently, and litter freely. Beeves need pure air and clean stables as much as horses; warmth is more important than light to them, as to all fattening stock.

Cows, however, need light, clean, stables, with good ventilation.—Warmth is desirable also, as well as great quiet. Give them an hour or two in a sunny yard daily if the weather be pleasant.

Young Stock.—Keep in warm sheds or stables, with the range of yards exposed to the south and east. Feed, water, and salt, regularly.

Sheep.—Keep in dry, roomy, sheds and yards; give plenty of litter, but accomodate them with some hard ground. Feed in racks and troughs protected by sheds. Increase the feed gradually. Oil-cake will probably be found as economical as any feed, more so than any other you can purchase. Sheep feeders are satisfied if they get the manure clear, the sheep selling for their cost with the value of the feed added.

"What do you mean by bringing me these bones? I ordered mutton chops!" "Well, sah, in dis establishment a mutton chop is a bone ob de sheep from which all de meat has been chopped off."

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS EXPERIENCE IN DENTISTRY.

J. M. SMITH, M. D., would respectfully inform the inhabitants of Bradford County that he is permanently located in Waverly, N. Y., where he has been in the practice of his profession for the past four years. He would say that from his long and successful practice of 25 years duration he is familiar with all the different styles of work done in any and all Dental Establishments in city or country, and is better prepared than any other Dental operator in the vicinity to do work the best adapted to the many and different cases that present themselves oftentimes to the Dentist, as he understands the art of making his own artificial teeth, and has facilities for doing the same. To those requiring under sets of teeth he would call attention to his new kind of work which consists of porcelain for both plate and teeth, and forming a continuous gum. It is more durable, more natural in appearance, and much better adapted to the gum than any other kind of work. Those in need of the same are invited to call and examine specimens. Teeth filled to last for years and oftentimes for life.—Chloroform, Ether, and "Nitrous Oxide" administered with perfect safety, as over four hundred patients within the last four years can testify.

I will be in Towanda from the 15th to 30th of every month, at the office of W. K. TAYLOR, (formerly occupied by Dr. O. H. Woodruff.)—Having made arrangements with Mr. Taylor, I am prepared to do all work in the very best style, at his office. April 23, 1867.

DR. VANBUSKIRK, Operative and Mechanical Dentist, has opened rooms in the Beldleman Block, directly opposite the Means House, for the practice of his profession, and is prepared to perform all operations belonging to Dentistry. The different kinds of Plate Work, will be recommended accor ing to their honest merits. Teeth will be extracted without pain, by the use of gas, chloroform or ether, and in a manner very satisfactory to patients, as the testimony of hundreds can be shown. Please call and examine specimens of our work, and be assured of the correctness of the statements. Advice and consultation will be cheerfully and gratuitously given.
