

Agricultural.

DON'T LEAVE THE FARM.
BY CLARA F. KEENE.
Come, boys, I have something to tell you. Come near, I would whisper it low. You are thinking of leaving the homestead. Don't be in a hurry to go. The city has many attractions. But think of the vines and aia. When once in the vortex of fashion, How soon the course downward begins. You talk of the mines of Australia. They're wealthy in gold, without doubt. But ah! there's gold on the farm, boys. If only you'll shovel it out. The mercantile life is a hazard. The goods are first high and then low. Better risk the old farm awhile longer. Don't be in a hurry to go!

The farm is the safest an' surest. The orchards are loaded to-day. You're free as the air of the mountains. And monarch of all you survey. Better stay on the farm awhile longer. Though profits come in rather slow, Remember you're nothing to risk, boys. Don't be in a hurry to go!
Massachusetts Ploughman.

From the New York Observer.
How to Succeed in Bee-Keeping.
To secure success in gathering the honey in your field:
1st. Reduce the number of your colonies to the supply of honey yielded by it. This must be reached by an investigation of the number of colonies already sustained and by a careful experiment in their introduction.

2d. By so controlling their swarming that the honey gathered by them shall be stored in the smallest number of hives, requiring the least amount of honey for winter and giving the greatest amount in surplus.
To accomplish this, hives should be used with a frame for the swarm, for breeding and wintering of from 1,600 to 2,000 cubic inches, and boxes upon the sides and top of the aggregate capacity of 100 to 150 pounds. So much room, with very free communication to the boxes, with the colony well-shaded, will render their swarming so improbable as not to exceed one in three. If a bee-keeper has a number of swarms of old-fashioned hives, let him prepare an equal number of the new hives, and when a swarm issues, place it in the new hive and the new hive upon the old stand; move the comb from the old hive; brushing off the bees, the whole will go into the new hive. If he places the worker brood comb in a box and the box in communication with the hive, the bees will enter it and hatch out all the brood, giving the amount of two full swarms to the new hive. As each hive sends out its first swarm, treat them in this manner. The result will be as many hundred pounds of surplus as you have such swarms placed in your new hives, divide them—placing a part in a new field.

3d. I make this statement confidently, from my experiments already made I had four hives of this description last spring; two of them gave me two swarms each and 203 pounds of surplus in boxes of 6 or 8 pounds; two of them gave me 297 pounds of surplus. The result, from the four, was four new swarms and 500 pounds of surplus—at the rate of 16 new swarms and one ton of surplus from 16 colonies. Having your bees already placed in the hives described, you may, in future years, control your swarms at pleasure.

4. If you wish to increase your colonies faster than they naturally swarm, near the close of the white clover honey harvest remove the boxes and confine the colony to the central apartment, and a swarm will issue in a few days. If the swarms increase too fast, so as to give danger of over-stocking, drive the whole colony in with the issuing swarm, and thus keep your stock down to the desired number in order to secure the greatest amount of surplus from your field.

Mr. Editor: I have the fullest confidence that the results of this system will secure the results here estimated and give you a surplus of 20 colonies of bees, if the number is restricted to the capacity of the field. I should be pleased to listen to any criticisms upon the proposed plan or answer any inquiries.
ALBANY, N. Y. JASPER HAZEN.

WHEN TO TURN IN CLOVER.—In the regions where green crops are turned under for manure, there is a diversity of practice. Some plow when the crop is in its most succulent state. The rule for clover is when the heads are about half turned brown. The reason offered for this practice is that the bulk of the crop is then greatest, and it undergoes its most rapid decomposition in the soil. Others do not plow in clover until late in the fall, and after it has been well pastured. The reasons they give for this practice are:
1st. That turning the clover green, makes the soil sour, and has a tendency to bring in sorrel.
2d. It has a bad influence upon subsequent crops.
3d. In waiting until fall, you have the advantage of pasturing; and if the cattle are kept upon the pasture, as they should be, everything the field produces is returned to the soil.
4th. More carbonaceous matter is returned to it. What you lose in tops, you gain in roots of the clover, which have four or five months longer to grow.
5th. Better crops follow. Some of the best farmers in Pennsylvania follow this method altogether. Others still wait till the following spring, and turn in the clover just as it begins to grow.
