As was anticipated from the result of the last-Massachusetts election, the Prohibitory Liquor law in that State has been repealed. Gov. Bullock Suited to the Spring Trade! however, seemes to have shrink the responsibility of signing the License lay which has been enacted in its stead, and it will take the effect without his approval. The Massachusetts people have made up their minds that prohibition is a failure: it remains to be seen whether they will be any better satisfied with the license system.
