SINGULAR FLIGHT OF A NEWSPAPER. A few days ago, the poultry and people near Potterville in this county, were not a little excited by a white object floating high in the air apparently about the size of the crown of a chip hat. It continued to float and quiver for more than a half hour when it gently settled down in a field where several hands were harvesting. On picking it up it proved to be a copy of the New York Independent with the label direction of a Mr. Eastman, of Orwell. The paper had travelled in a straight line over two miles, and no one knows how far in its struggle upward. The family recognized their paper, but knew nothing about its departure. A sharp boy remarked "that the Independent had tried to get to Heaven and didn't succeed,"-another stated the reason that it was not yet quite orthodox enough to be admitted.
