Pipe shrilly 'mid the stubble day,

Their petals scattered far and wid

Bodeck the lane on either side ;

And muffled beats from busy flails,

Afar I hear the speckled quaits

Within the barn near be

The intest roses now are dead,

dreamy calm is in the air-

A dreamy echo on the ses ;

Ab, mover was a day more fair

Than this, which blesses me !

I see the shocks of ripened corn The yellowed mosses on the roof,

An asure haze is hanging low

About the outline of the hills, And chanting sea-fowl southward go

From marshes, fiats, and kills.

For many years the antumn brough A solemn sadness to my soul-It sombered e'en my lightest though

And on my gayest moments stole Twas sad, yet sweet-a strange allog Of hope and sofrow intertwined-

And why is this ? The dead leaves fall The blossoms wither as of old ;

And winter comes, with snowy pall,

To wrap the earth so chill and cold ;

The sea-fowl, string albwart the sky,

And why, then leaves and blossoms die.

Still chant their plaintive monot

Oh, ask me not-I must not tell ; I dare not all my heart disclose
