Agricultural.

How much Ground will Summer a Cow.

After concluding that pasturing is a wasteful system, we determined to know just how wasteful it is. Having a field near the barn on which was growing a very heavy crop of clover, forty square rods were measured, and when the clover came to its most nutritious state, just before blossoming, we began feeding it to seven cows and four horses, equal to twelve cows, and it fed them abundantly fifteen days. The two following seasons we tried the same experiment differing somewhat in kind and number of animals. On the second, six cows and five horses were fed fourteen days; and in the third, eleven cows were fed fifteen days—in each instance on the clover grown upon forty rods of ground. It will be seen that this was about equal to keeping one cow through the pasturing season on one fourth acre. We know this is an extraordinory reslut, and can only be accomplished when the land is in the highest condition and the crop the largest; but it shows in the strongest light the gain in soiling animals. When the land is in good condition, one half acre may be relied upon to furnish abundance of food for a cow through the summer, and this will enable the farmer to keep four to six cows on the same land that would pasture one.

In 1862 we tried a larger experiment, soiling twenty steers, four years old, seven cows and six horses —being, perhaps equivalent to thirty-five cows. We set apart the amount of land which was supposed to be just sufficient to pasture this stock for the season—one hundred acres. These hundred acres were occupied as follows: ninety acres in timothy, two in clover, two in sowed corn, and one in oats. The order of seeding was as follows; first the two acres of clover; second, the five acres of clover and timothy; next the oats; then the timothy meadow, till it became too tough; next the second cutting of clover; then sowed corn and hay till the first day of December—leaving a surplus of sixty-five tons of hay, which were sold for $972. The soiling began May 20th, and continued six months and ten days. Fifty acres of this land were in poor condition, and the balance in good heart. Had it all been in prime condition, the surplus would have been very much larger. Now, let us dissect this experiment, and see what it was worth. The labor account is first to be examined. Three men, two hours each day were required to cut the grass and feed these animals. This, with the low wages prevailing at that time, amounted, with board, to the sum of $65. If the expense of cutting and sowing this sixty-five tons of hay be estimated at $1.50 per ton (which is more than it cost), amounting to $97.50, added to the labor of soiling, makes $162.50, which being deducted from the $972, leaves $809.50 as the net profit of this soiling experiment. But it would be only just to estimate the gain in manure. One hundred large loads were saved, and if we say this is worth double, thus saved under cover, what the droppings in the field would have been, then this was worth $50 extra, making the whole gain $859.50. To this might be added something for the better condition of animals and the larger quantity of milk.

Effect upon the health of Animals: Many will be ready to ask "whether soiling is consistent with the health of the animal?" This doubt results from the supposed necessary confinment of the animal. But soiling may be practiced with the largest liberty. No confinment prejudicial to the animals health is necessary. We have animals that have been soiled from six to thirteen years. One cow, now sixteen years old has been thus fed for thirteen summers and has always been healthy; another cow has been soiled eight years. We have raised colts in that way, and thought them more thrifty and quite as healthy as those raised of pasture. We regard it as promotive of health, as the animal has a more equal diet, not subject to such fluctuations of abundance and scarcity as in pasture.

SHEEP SKIN MATS.—The following is for two skins, and if the directions are faithfully followed, will make something nice:

Make strong soap suds, using hot water, and let it stand till cold; then wash the skins in it, carefully squeezing the dirt from among the wool; then wash them in cold water till the soap is out. Next dissolve half a pound each of salt and alum in a little hot water, and put into a tub of cold water sufficient to cover the skins and let them soak twelve hours; then hang over a pole to drain. When well drained, stretch carefully on a board to dry; stretch several times while drying. Before they get entirely dry, sprinkle on the flesh side one ounce each of finely pulverized alum and saltpetre, rubbing it in well; then lay the flesh sides together and hang in the shade for two or three days, turning them over till perfectly dry.

Finish by scraping the flesh side with a blunt knife to remove any remaining scraps of flesh, and then rub the flesh side with pumice or rotten stone and the hands. Very beautiful mittens can be made of lamb skins tanned as above.

HOW GOOD FARMERS SAVE MONEY.—They take good papers and read them.

They keep account of farm operations.

They do not leave their implements scattered over the farm, exposed to the rain, snow and heat.

They repair tools and buildings at the proper time, and do not suffer a threefold expenditure of time and money.

They use their money judiciously and do not attend auction sales to purchase all kinds of trumpery because it is "cheap."

They do not refuse to make correct experiments, in a small way, of many new things.

They plant their fruit trees well, care for them, and of course have good crops.

Successful farming is made up by attention to the little things. The farmer who does his best, earns his money with best appreciation, and uses it with best results. Such men are the "salt of the earth."

PRESERVING EGGS.—A Parisian paper recommends the following method for the preservation of eggs: Dissolve four ounces of beeswax in eight ounces of warm olive oil, in this put the tip of the finger and annoint the egg all around. The oil will immediately be absorbed by the shell and the pores filled up by the wax. If kept in a cool place, the eggs, after two years, will be as good as if fresh laid.

THE GLORY OF THE CROSS.

The Cross of Christ is an object of such transcendant brightness, that it spreads a glory round it to all the nations of the earth, all the corners of the universe, all the generations of time, and all the ages of eternity. The greatest actions or events that ever happened on earth filled with their splendor and influence but a moment of time and a point of space; but the splendor of this great object fills immensity and eternity. If we take a right view of its glory, we shall see it spreading influence and attracting regards from times past, present and to come—heaven, earth and hell—angels' saints and devils. We shall see it to be both the object of the deepest admiration of the creature, and the perfect approbation of of the infinite Creator. We shall see the best part of mankind for four thousand years looking forward to it before it happened, and new generations yet unborn rising up to admire and honor it in continual succession till time shall be no more. We shall see innumerable multitudes of angels and saints looking back to it with holy transport to the remotest ages of eternity. Other glories decay by length of time. If the splendor of this object change it will be only by increasing. The visible sun will spend his beams in process of time, and, as it were grow dim with age; this object hath a rich store of beams which eternity cannot exhaust. If saints and angels grow in knowledge the splendor of this object will be still increasing. 'Tis unbelief that intercepts its beams. Unbelief takes place only on the earth. There is no such thing in heaven or in hell. It will be a great part of future blessedness to remember the object that purchased it; and of future punishment to remember the object that offered deliverance from it. It will add life to the beams of love in heaven, and intensity to the misery of the unsaved. Its rays will not only adorn the regions of light but pierce the realms of darkness. It will be the desire of the saints in light, and the plague of the Prince of Darkness and his subjects.

Its glory produces powerful effects wherever it shines. They who behold this glory are transformed into the same image. It melts cold and frozen hearts; it breaks stony hearts; it pierces adamant; it penetrates thro' thick darkness. How justly is it called "marvellous light!" It gives eyes to the blind to look to itself—and not only to the blind, but to the dead. It is "the light of life"—a powerful light. Its energy is beyond the force of thunder; and it is more mild than the dew on the tender herb.—Observer.

THE GREAT LESSONS.—The first great lesson a young man should learn is that he knows nothing. The earlier and the more thoroughly this lesson is learned the better. A home bred youth growing up in the light of parental admiration, with everything to foster his vanity and self-esteem, is surprised to find, and often unwilling to acknowledge, the superiority of other people. But he is compelled to learn his insignificance; his airs are ridiculed, his blunders exposed, his wishes disregarded, and he is made to cut a sorry figure, until his self-conceit is abased, and he feels that he knows nothing.

When a young man has thoroughly comprehended the fact that he knows nothing, and that, intrinsically, he is of but little value, the next lesson is that the world cares nothing about him. He is the subject of no man's overwhelming admiration; neither petted by the one sex nor envied by the other, he has to take care of himself. He will not be noticed till he becomes noticeable; he will not become noticeable until he does something to prove that he is of some use to society. No recommendation or introduction will give him this, or ought to give him this; he must do something to be recognized as somebody.

The next lesson is that of patience. A man must learn to wait as well as to work, and to be content with those means of advancement in life which he may use with integrity and honor. Patience is one of the most difficult lessons to learn. It is natural for the mind to look for immediate results.

ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE.—An Iowa paper of a recent date gives the particulars of a romantic story which borders somewhat on the marvelous. Years ago a Pennsylvania farmer loved and married a charming young girl that lived near him. The marriage time passed on, and soon the farmer contracted a taste for liquor, which frequently got the best of him. His wife remonstrated with him, which on one occasion ended by the husband stabbing her with a butcher knife. He left precipitately, supposing he had killed her—hid himself in the West, where in a few years he became a prosperous and wealthy merchant. The wife in the meantime recovered, and after living alone for five years, married again. Her husband, however, died at the expiration of a year, and she also went to the West. Then the incredible part of the story appeared. The parties met again after their long separation, and became acquainted, but neither recognized the other. An engagement was entered into, resulting in marriage; and, upon the wife disrobing in the evening he notices the scar made by his hand years ago, and suddenly recognizes her as his wife of former years! Here is a chance for story writers.

RICH WITHOUT MONEY.—Many a man is rich without money. Thousands of men with nothing in their pockets, and thousands with a good, sound, constitution, a good heart, and good limbs, and pretty good head-piece are rich.

Good bones are better than gold, tough muscles are better than silver, and nerves that flash fire and carry energy to every function, are better than houses or land. It is better than landed estates to have had the right kind of father and mother.—Good breeds and bad breeds exist among men as really as among herds and horses. Education may do much to check evil tendencies, or to develop good ones, but it is good to inherit the right proportion of faculties to start with. That man is rich who has a flavor of wit and fun in his composition. The hardest thing to get along with in this life is a man's own self. A cross, selfish fellow, a desponding and complaining fellow, a timid, care-burdened man—these are all deformed on the inside. Their feet may not limp, but their thoughts do. A man of fortune on the brink of the grave, would gladly part with every dollar to obtain a longer lease of life.

FAMILY SEWING MACHINES,

Were awarded the First Prize at the Paris Exposition, 1867, over 82 other Machines.

Also, the following State Fairs of 1868 have awarded this Machine the first premium:

New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, Wisconsin, and Indiana.

At the County Fairs of Madison, Onondaga, Oswego, Wayne, Orleans, Tompkins, Seneca, Monroe, Herkimer, Schuyler, Livingston, and a host of others.

Report of the Committee on Sewing Machines, at the State Fair held in Rochester, fall of 1868: "Your Committee have examined the different Sewing Machines, to which their attention was called, and would recommend as the best Family Machine for all work. Elias Howe's Sewing Machine, and for the following reasons: 1st—Simplicity of construction. 2d—Regularity of tension on both upper and lower threads. 3d—Ease of management. 4th—Great range of work upon all materials. 5th—The perfect attachments to the Machine for felling, hemming, tucking, braiding, quilting, binding and cording, and the ease with which they are applied. 6th—The durability of the Machine, it being made of hardened steel, and adjusted in its bearings. We recommend a medal."

New style Hemmer, Braider, Tucker, Quilter, Corder, Embroiderer, Binder, Feller and Improved Tuck Marker.

It will use any and every kind of thread, from the finest to the coarsest, with a much smaller needle than other machines. Be sure and examine one before you purchase. Price from $60 to $200, and every machine warranted. The real value of our Manufacturing Machines for Tailors, Boot, Shoe, Harness and Carriage Makers, is too well known to require comment.
