Agricultural.

Arithmetic in Farming.

A freer use of the multiplication table would enable farmers to act with more precision in many operations now conducted entirely by guesswork. We have frequent inquiries, for example, as to the proper amount of manures to be applied per acre for different crops; but the use being new, the application is made without any guide as to the quantity, any too much is used in one case and too little in another. One man injures his crops and waste the material by overdosing: another uses too little, and does not witness any sensible effect. A little figuring would obviate these difficulties, and enable the farmer to calculate accurately beforehand just how much to apply. Suppose, for instance, that he proposes to use superphosphate at the rate of 500 pounds per acre in his turnip drill. Instead of trying at random, and coming out wrong, as he will be sure to do, let him bring his work down, to figures, in the following manner. His drills, we will suppose, are twenty-eight inches apart, amounting to 1120 rods in length on each acre, or at the rate of about seven ounces per rod. Or, to be more accurate, as well as to take a more convenient length, the fertilizer should be strewed along the furrow at the rate of one ounce to two feet and two inches in length. Weigh out a small quantity in ounce portions, and practice a few minutes by strewing it along a furrow so that each ounce shall reach a measured length of two feet and two inches. A little practice will enable the operator to apply the fertilizer so that he can distribute the required quantity over the acre or field, with much accuracy. If he wishes to use only half this quantity, or two hundred and fifty pounds per acre, strew it so that an ounce shall extend four feet four inches, and he will accomplish the desired purpose.

If a fertilizer is to be applied in hills, as in a corn-field, a similar mode of calculation may be readily adopted. Hills three feet and a half apart each way, will be at the rate of about 3500 per acre, requiring about two ounces per hill, if 500 pounds of the fetilizer are used, or one ounce for 250 pounds.

The same mode may be used to determine the amount of grass seed for each handful in sowing broadcast. Each throw will cover, as before, from five to ten feet, and whatever quantity is used for an acre should, therefore, be divided into about a thousand parts. A peck of clover seed, for example, weighs fifteen pounes, and to cover an acre, each handful should be a little less than the fourth of an ounce. The previous use of a pair of scales for weighing off a few of these portions, would enable the operator to hit at once, with considerable accuracy, the right quantity, instead of being compelled to make random guesses for days, or even years, before acquiring proper experience.

It is often regarded as an indication of shrewd guessing when the farmer brings his domestic animals through the winter on the exact supply of fodder which he has stored away for that purpose. Sometimes he may find towards spring, that he has many tons of surplus, and perhaps, more frequently, that he has to purchase a considerable amount, in order to "piece out" the winter supply. Measuring, weighing and calculating, the work of a few minutes, will obviate much of this uncertainty. The farmer who frequently weighs a load of hay, acquires sufficient experience in estimating, to determine, very nearly, from a record of the size and number of the loads which he draws into the barn, the whole amount which he has on hand for the winter. If he has neglected to do this, may with the amount nearly as well by measuring his bays, and allowing an average of 500 cubic feet per ton of timothy, 600 feet if part clover. He will thus be able to learn, very nearly, how much hay he has on hand. The next question is to know how much his animals will eat. If he has provided good racks, to prevent them treading hay under foot, and has given them fair shelter, he may adopt the following rule with a good deal of certainty: Determine the weight of his animals, and allow three per cent. of the weight of his horses for their daily food in hay, and two and a half per cent. for cattle. Multiply this daily allowance by the whole number of animals, and again by the number of days which he expects to give them dry food, and then to compare with the quantity on hand, and he may strike the balance, one way or the other, with considerable certainty.

Every farmer should have a tape line or other means for measuring his fields. If he has much experience in pacing, he may indeed make temporary measurements with some degree of accuracy, but he should frequently correct such rough work with the tape line. Every field should be measured, so that the owner may know the number of acres, and a record should also be made of its length and breadth, that the amount of land ploughed in a day may be readily reckoned, and the contents of each "land" definitely known.—Among other advantages, this accuracy will enable the owner to determine easily acreable products under different modes of management, and to acquire a great deal of valuable information in a few years as to the most profitable way of raising heavy crops.

There are many other modes, which will suggest themselves to the intelligent farmer, for adopting the weighing and measuring system, and submitting his work to accurate figures, instead of to loose and random guessing. Every granary should have a graduated scale inside, to show at a glance the number of bushels at any height. A similar measurement and record should be made of his wagon boxes. These he may do by measuring the length, depth and breadth for the cubic feet. Then divide the number of cubic feet by 56, and multiply by 45, and the result will be struck measure. Or, he may allow 2,150 cubic inches for each bushel, or add one-fourth for heaped measure, as for potatoes, corn in the ear, &c.—Country Gentleman.

RECIPES.—Oyster Soup.—Take one hundred oysters out of the liquor, add an equal quantity of water. Boil it with one tablespoonful of crushed allspice, a little mace, some cayenne pepper and salt. Let it boil twelve minutes, then strain it, put it back in the stew pan, and the oysters. As soon as it begies to boil, add a teacupful of cream, and a little grated cracker rubbed in one ounce of butter. As soon as the oysters are plump, serve them.

A GEORGIA editor hearing of General Sherman as "the coming man," expresses a fervent hope that he is not coming that way again.

Sewing Machines.

THE NEW AND IMPROVED ELIAS HOWE FAMILY SEWING MACHINES,

Were awarded the First Prize at the Paris Exposition, 1867, over 33 other Machines.

Also, the following State Fairs of 1868 have awarded this Machine the first premium:

New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, Wisconsin, and Indiana.

At the County Fairs of Madison, Onondaga, Oswego, Wayne, Orleans, Tompkins, Seneca, Monroe, Herkimer, Schuyler, Livingston, and a host of others.

Report of the Committee on Sewing Machines, at the State Fair held in Rochester, fall of 1868: "Your Committee have examined the different Sewing Machines, to which their attention was called. I would recommend as the best Family Machine for use, Elias Howe's Sewing Machine, and for the following reasons: 1st—Simplicity of construction. 2d—Regularity of tension on both upper and lower threads. 3d—Ease of management. 4th—Great range of work upon all materials. 5th—The perfect attachments to the Machine for felling, hemming, tucking, braiding, cording, binding and corading, and the ease with which they are applied. 6th—The durability of the Machine, it being made of hardened steel and adjusted in its bearings. We recommend a double-thread, New style Hemmer, Braider, Tucker, Quilter, Corder, Embroiderer, Binder, Feller and Improved Tuck Marker.

It will use any and every kind of thread, from the finest to the coarsest, with a smoother stitch than other machines. Be sure and examine one before you purchase. Price from $40 to $200, and every machine warranted. The real value of our Manufacturing Machines for Tailors, Boot, Shoe, Harness and Carriage Makers, is too well known to require comment. Don't fail to call and see them.
