Country Farming.

Our agricultural readers will be glad to know what Horace Greeley thinks of "Country Farming," and for their benefit we give below a neat little speech which he made at the New York press dinner last Saturday. The toast which called up Mr. Greeley was "Country Farming, and City Editing," and this is what he said, which was received with the most generous applause:

I don't quite understand whether I am expected to demonstrate an agreement or a contrariety between these two things. At any rate, it the purpose of the sentiment is to affirm that one of these pursuits is delightful and attractive as the other, I respectfully non-concur. As to city editing, I have had something more of it than I have desired, and more than I could enjoy. As to my farming, there are gentlemen who have spoken of it rather more freely than their limited knowledge of the subject would admit. I think I have seen some celebrated statements of the cost of each turnip—and these statements were made by gentlemen who have not been generally thought so attentive to the cost of things as these calculations would seem to imply. I have not made any such calculations myself, for I have been a little shy of doing so.

Let me, however, say a few words about country farming, which is a thing I very much believe in. Having done some share of work in the world, I lay down this proposition: That all men or women who can get their work done by 8 o'clock at night need not consider their condition a hard one. When it stretches far into the night—11,12, 1, 2, 3,—It begins to be irksome. I find it irksome. I am not now so fond of sitting up with a newspaper all night—nor with anybody else. This, then, I can say for country farming, that while it has some rugged aspects, and does not promise any such brilliant and rapid advances to fortune as some of our friends like to achieve in Wall street, it is just about the safest and surest thing any one can engage in; and it is, moreover, a tranquil and certain delight to any human being—who can enjoy his own society. My little place, while it is nothing to brag of—there is this to be said about it: I have the most delightful barn full of corn, rich, golden corn, that ever you saw in your lives. Now, that is something achieved, something to look at. I have been at work on the press for forty years; and this seems to be the hardship. You work for days, and months, and years, and what have you to show? Something, I hope, in mental growth; something in firmness of purpose; something in clearness of intention, but outwardly? Nothing! Thirty years have passed away, and where is the fruit of all that labor? How can your labors compare with those of the man who has produced a book? And here let me say that, in my judgement, no good book ever was or can be produced on the instigation of a $50,000 check. Such books as that of John Bunyan have been produced by authors who never thought they would get a dime for them. These are the books that live. The books that the $50,000 will buy—will they sell? I hope so; but the world is charitable and soon forgets them.

Country farming will help also to develope one of the phases of the question of woman's rights—whereon I have not so full a part as some of our friends would wish. Country farming gives just the right field for the developement of your energies. Any number of you are wanted to take part in country farming. You need not dispute or clamor—there it is. "The world is all before you where too choose." If any lady wants her rights—I am a wood-chopper—I will furnish an axe and the trees, and give her scope and verge enough. There are plenty of opportunities; so, then, why don't some of our friends who want their rights come out into the country and take them? There need be no controversy. Wide enough is the world; and there is work enough for all. I hope that some of this din and controversy will roll itself abroad into work; and that our excellent friend, "the last, best gift," and so on, will achieve her rights with her own right hand.

Cooking Food for Stock.

The Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture discussed this subject at their meeting in December, 1867, as we find in the report of that body for 1867-8. The speakers were all men of high character, mature years, experienced in the breeding, keeping and fattening of cattle, most of them engaged in the dairy business—and there was but little difference of opinion as to the use and value of feed cooked in some way. Prof. Agassiz, the illustrious naturalist, shows in the following clear, plain and unmistakable language, the reason why food for domestic animals should be prepared it being promised that the food we give our stock is not that which nature provides at first hands, but is dried and mechanically altered in many ways. Soaking or steaming restores hay to its wonted bulk and succulence; and Prof. Agassiz said of this mode of preparing food in general: "It must save the secretion of saliva to an enormous extent, and therefore relieve the animal from a physiological labor which is very manifest. I have no doubt that must be the chief source of relief to the cattle, because dry food must be softened in order to be digested; and it must be done by the secretions of the mouth—by the secretory surfaces of the alimentary canal—and, in fact, by all the secretory surfaces of the digestive apparatus. Now, where does that come from? From the blood: and if you supply the food so far softened that the animal is relieved from that physiological labor, you place your animal in a much better condition for its work. I have no doubts that there is the explanation of your results—that your steam performs a part of the operation which your animal has to do for itself by its secretion."

FIGS IN POTS—The Royal Horticultural Society of London has over one hundred and thirty varieties of figs, all grown under pot culture. This is probably the largest and most complete collection in existence.—Over thirty varieties of fruit were exhibited at the Manchester Horticultural show last summer.

SAWDUST FOR GRAPE VINES.—Mr. Holton denounces the use of sawdust in any shape, unless carefully composted and completely decayed, as a mulch for grapes or as a mechanical mixture in the soil. His experience in its use had cost him $3,000, and he had used the least objectionable kind he knew of.

Sewing Machines.

THE NEW AND IMPROVED ELIAS HOWE

FAMILY SEWING MACHINES,

Were awarded the First Prize at the Paris Exposition, 1867, over 82 other Machines.

Also, the following State Fairs of 1868 have awarded this Machine the first premium:

New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, Wisconsin, and Indiana.

At the County Fairs of Madison, Onondaga, Oswego, Wayne, Orleans, Tompkins, Seneca, Monroe, Herkimer, Schuyler, Livingston, and a host of others.

Report of the Committee on Sewing Machines, at the State Fair held in Rochester, fall of 1868: "Your Committee have examined the different Sewing Machines, to which their attention was called, and would recommend as the best Family Machine for all work, Elias Howe's Sewing Machine, and for the following reasons: 1st—Simplicity of construction. 2d—Regularity of tension on both upper and lower threads. 3d—Ease of management. 4th—Great range of work upon all materials. 5th—The perfect attachments to the Machine for falling, hemming, tucking, braiding, quilting, binding and cording, and the ease with which they are applied. 6th—The durability of the Machine, it being made of hardened steel, and adjusted in its bearings. We recommend a medal."

New style Hemmer, Braider, Tucker, Quilter, Corder, Embroiderer, Binder, Feller and Improved Tuck Marker.

It will use any and every kind of thread, from the finest to the coarsest, with a much smaller needle than other machines. Be sure and examine one before you purchase. Price from $60 to $200, and every machine warranted. The real value of our Manufacturing Machines for Tailors, Boot, Shoe, Harness and Carriage Makers, is too well known to require comment. Don't fail to call and see them.
