Agricultural.

Improved Farm Stock.

GOOD ANIMALS THE MOST PROFITABLE.

Poor animals are not profitable as farm stock—Breed from the best animals, and let sire and dame be as perfect as possible.

Improvement is the ruling star of the nineteenth century. Men of every class, and in nearly all pursuits, acknowledge its sway. It has already brought incalculable good to the farming interest. Farmers are, perhaps, too slow to acknowledge this; and too slow to avail themselves of the proffered advantages of real improvements. True, they are some times imposed upon by unscrupulous and unprincipled lovers of gain; and hence their cautious fear of what is really valuable. But this need not often occur. Any one, possessing the ordinary intelligence of our common farmers, by timely investigation, aided by good judgement, and a careful reading of Agricultural papers, may usually avoid the snare of the mere pretender.

Animals that you can depend on to transmit their good qualities through many generations, must have had a perfect descent from pure blooded stock. If an animal has had a defective ancestry, though in many past generations, such generations, such imperfection may show itself at any time in the young stock from such a source.

In matter of farm stock, its perpetuation is controlled by certain fixed principles of breeding.

There is a great difference in the breeds of our stock, and in the animals of the breeds. Some fatten easily, and come to maturity early, and others do not. Some possess remarkable milking qualities, while others yield sparingly. Some are noted for their butter qualities, and others are fine workers. Now, we want to search out and find the rules which govern the transmission of various qualities, that we may be enabled at will to breed animals possessing the distinct characteristics we desire. The old maxim that "like produces like," is a good one, and is safe to follow.

The male parent generally influences the size and external form of the offspring, and the female the vital power, health and constitution.

The best thorough-bred will degenerate, unless supplied with nourishing food, and kept in general good health.

In-and-in breeding should be avoided generally, and only allowed when both parents are singularly free from defects.

Many of our farmers say "but I cannot obtain these improved animals without paying a high price for them." To encourage unbelieving breeders to make a liberal outlay for good blood, I will refer to the following. A breeder recently offered a neighbor of mine, $35 for all the calves on his place from weaning to twelve months old—he declined the offer—on the adjoining farms he could have bought calves of the same age from $2 to $6 per head. He said he would not drive them home and keep them three days if they were presented to him. Why? The improved breed of calves could be made to gross 1,700 lbs. at three years old; the others, if ever, at five or six years; one consuming as much grass, requiring the same care as the other. Comment is unnecessary.

* * * *

If you hear of any man's giving a thousand dollars for a cow or two thousand for a bull, you may safely infer he is a large dealer in cattle or professional breeder, and has made what he thinks a judicious investment for his business. All well-bred pigs I can raise, are in demand at $10 to $15 each, at from two to three months old. All the improved varieties of sheep pay—their lambs selling from $20 to $25 per head at weaning time. The improved breeds of poultry pay—what is it that don't pay, if the best of its kind and well cared for? What mongrel stock does pay? If any, I have to find it out.

What profit is there in keeping a razor-backed hog until he is eighteen months old, to get two hundred pounds of pork when the same feed given, in nine months, to a Chester White, will give you the same quantity of pork, or more? Is it nothing to save nine months of carrying slop, and grass, purslain and corn? If you will keep the Chester White until he is eighteen months old, he will weigh from 450 to 550 pounds, and, perhaps, half as much more. The profit on a hog of good breed is in his extra weight, at a given age, on a given quantity of food. That breeding fine swine is profitable is evident from the fact that the same men are in the business now that were in it ten years ago; and most, if not all of them, in easy circumstances.—Stock Journal.

Poultry Raising.—John J. Moore, of Quakertown, has sent us the result of his experience in raising poultry during the year 1869, including the first three days of the present year as follows:—"We kept 30 hens and 4 roosters, a cross of the old Cochin Chinas and White Bramas. During the above period they laid 3,983 eggs, of which those that were sold averaged 32 cts. per dozen, 796 of them being laid in three winter moths. We raised to full marketable size 110 chickens, selling all that were large enough for market up to the first of seventh-month at an average of 30 cents per pound. On the tenth of twelfth-month I took to market 20 pairs of the young ones, among which were 8 pairs of roosters, the smallest pair weighing 12 pounds, averaging 13 pounds per pair; the whole lot reselling at twenty cents per pound.—The purchasers remarked that they did not look as if they had the cholera. On the 2nd inst., I took 13 pairs, still younger, 7 pairs of which were roosters, averaging 11 pounds per pair; the rest pullets, averaging 9 pounds per pair; 6 pairs were sold at 24 cents per pound, and the balance at 22 cents. The way to do it is simple. Give the hens plenty to eat, and give the children two cents per dozen for finding the eggs and making the nests. When the chickens are put up to fatten, vary their feed and give them plenty of water, gravel, and pounded charcoal, and keep the hens and roosters in different pens.—Bucks Co. In.

Lime as a Preserver.—Air slacked lime has been frequently recommended as a preserver for vegetables when stored in pits. Recently we heard a gentleman state that he was in the habit of sprinkling it among his apples in barrels and bins, and he thought delicate fall varieties could thus be kept much beyond their season. The lime dust could be easily removed from the apples by using a cloth or brush, and it imparted no flavor to the fruit. The use of lime in the cellar, as a preservative agent, is a good idea. It acts by absorbing moisture, and if one individual in the mass decays, the lime arrests the spread of the disease to others.

Sewing Machines.

THE NEW AND IMPROVED ELIAS HOWE FAMILY SEWING MACHINES,

Were awarded the First Prize at the Paris Exposition, 1867, over 82 other Machines.

Also, the following State Fairs of 1868 have awarded this Machine the first premium:

New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, Wisconsin, and Indiana.

At the County Fairs of Madison, Onondaga, Oswego, Wayne, Orleans, Tompkins, Seneca, Monroe, Herkimer, Schuyler, Livingston, and a host of others.

Report of the Committee on Sewing Machines, at the State Fair held in Rochester, fall of 1868: "Your Committee have examined the different Sewing Machines, to which their attention was called, and would recommend as the best Family Machine for all work, Elias Howe's Sewing Machine, and for the following reasons: 1st—Simplicity of construction. 2d—Regularity of tension on both upper and lower threads. 3d—Ease of management. 4th—Great range of work upon all materials. 5th—The perfect attachments to the Machine for felling, hemming, tucking, braiding, quilting, binding and cording, and the ease with which they are applied. 6th—The durability of the Machine, it being made of hardened steel, and adjusted in its bearings. We recommend a medal."

New style Hemmer, Braider, Tucker, Quilter, Conter, Embroiderer, Binder, Feller and Improved Tuck Marker.

It will use any and every kind of thread, from the finest to the coarsest, with a much smaller needle than other machines. Be sure and examine one before you purchase. Price from $60 to $200 and every machine warranted. The real value of our Manufacturing Machines for Tailors Boot Shoe, Harness and Carriage Makers, is too well known to require comment. Don't fail to call and see them.
