way company owning the road thro' this valley to fence it in; by alledging that it was calculated to excite prejudice against a company which has spent millions of dollars in building the Railway, etc., etc.,—and finally winds up by showing that somebody was paid very considerable damages because a canal was constructed through his land, and among the items was one for the expense of fencing said canal. Very excellent dust this to blow into people's eyes; and no doubt in the opinion of "A Railroad man," quite blinding; but it hardly requires a yankee to guess that the farmers along the line of the road will conclude, that the enter-prising men forming the body corporate which built and is now operating this road, did not build the road excellent men that they are, with an eye entirely single to the "full fifty per cent. enhancement of all farm and village property throughout the whole route of the road." We shall this road to make money by it-and they are making money both by the immense traffic, freight and passen ger, which passes over their road and also by the increased value of the immese coal fields owned by them which are enhanced in value not merely fifty, but fully five hundred per cent. by the construction of the road. Why should they be released from the obligation to protect their own property? Railroad prop-
