Proper Treatment of Colts.

Over-feeding with any kind of food particularly with grain, is one of the worst evils that can befall a colt. What he wants is growth, not fat, not mettle, artificially infused or awakened. This is a premature call on the future strength. Good tender hay and grass are the feed, winter and summer, for a colt, varied a little if desired, but not with grain. A little corn or barley may be given where the hay is poor, over-ripened or ill-cured. Thus a colt should grow, reserving its strength, and grow into tractability as well, the whole thing being carried on, growth and tuition, till at the proper age you have a horse in limb and in training. You then stand a chance to have a sound horse, a well-developed, kind and tractable one that you can rely upon. At six and seven, and thence for many years, your horse will be a serviceable animal, an instrument trained to order; and you are the one that should drive him and keep him: no one will get the good out of him that NewYork(arr.) 6,05 over-do; never abuse because you dines at Pittstor. may be passionate, never over-heat nor expose to the cold after heating; and keep out of the cold rains. Treat well but do not namper: treat as well but do not pamper; treat as a horse, with strength yet kindness.— F. G. in Country Gentleman.

amount of meat obtained from a domestic animal sold by live weight is quite variable. From the statistics derived from the public slaughter house of Pariss and Brussels, it appears that certain animals yield as much as seventy per cent. of meat, while others give only fifty per cent. The mean weight of meat, produced is calculated at fifty-eight per cent. of the live weight in beef cattle. In the case of sheep the proportion is from forty to fifty per cent. It appears that different products from oxen and sheep are as follows: An ox of the live weight of 1,332 pounds, yields—meat 771.4 pounds; skin, 110.2; grease, 87; blood 55.1; feet and hoofs, 22; head 11; tongue, 6.60; lungs and heart, 15.33; liver and spleen, 20.05; intestines, 66.15; loss and evaporation, 154,352; making the total of 1,332 pounds. The product from a sheep weighing 110.2 pounds is as follows: Meat, 55.1; head, 408; feet and hoofs, 2.204; blood, 4.408; tongue, lungs and heart, liver and spleen, 4.408; intestines, 6.612; loss and evaporation, 18.736—making the total of 110.2 pounds. the case of sheep the proportion is

MAKE YOUR TREES BRANCH LOW .-Train your pear trees for garden or field use, so that they will branch at a distance of one or two feet from the QUSQUEHANNA COLLEGIATE ground. The advantages are easily enumerated: 1st. It is easy to trim.

2d. It is easy to gather the fruit. 3d. Falling fruit is little injured. 4th. All branches being sturdy, will not be strained by over-bearing or over-weight of fruit. 5th. Soil will be kept shaded and moist.

6th. Trunk will be protected from the scorching sun. 7th. Tree will grow more and more beautiful.

take also four pounds of good potatoes, weighed after they are pared, slice them thick and put a portion of them in a layer in a stew pan; season the mutton well with pepper and place some of it on the potatoes; cover it with another layer and proceed in like manner with all, reserving plenty of the vegetables for the top; pour in three-quarters of a pint of water and add when the stew begins to boil an ounces of salt. Let it simmer gently two hours and serve it very hot. When the addition of DENNSYLVANIA an onion is liked, mince it and strew it over the potatoes.

POTATO BISSOLES-FRENCH.-Mash and season the potatoes with salt and white pepper and cayenne, and mix with plenty of minced parsley and a small quantity of green onions, add sufficient yolks of eggs to bind the mixture together; roll into small balls and fry them in plenty of lard or butter over a moderate fire, or they will be too much browned before they are done through.

Sweet-Potato Pone one and three-fourths of a pound of sweet-potatoes boiled and mashed, stir in while warm two tablespoons of butter: beat these well, add a little salt, three tablespoons of good brown sugar, one of ground ginger; beat in three gills of milk; when quite light from beating pour into a buttered pan, and three-fourths of an hour.
