Yes, slowly, but still surely. The crowning glory of humankind has already dawned and is gradually spreading. Let us look for a moment this morning at the condition of its meridian fulness and completeness! This condition is "Christian Culture"-the truths, methods, institutions and habitudes of the Christian religion.

I cannot pause to point out how this culture relates to the lower elements of man's nature—to his physical and intellectual powers and faculties. This is an interesting study, and one for which much light might be gathered from contemporaneous European events; time will permit me only to show the effect of this culture upon the higher moral nature. This is the final, ultimate element. lying back of the others and effectuating them by its energy and suffusreach a high pitch of physical or ineent of both body and soul. Soulculture necessitates body-culture. If the soul be a temple of the Holy Ghost it throws the halo of its purity and the majesty of its dignity over the entire material organism. As to soundest minds are those whose instincts are moral, and whose processes and judgments are controlled by moral laws and based on moral grounds. The highest genius is a genius of conscience. The nobles have been inspired and swayed by he powers of the world to come. Now if this be true, it is self-evident that man can never reach his highest glory until this element of his nature is disciplined and developed in all its powers and aspects; until his spiritual nature assumes its primal place as the director of his whole being. It is right here that all other schemes of Education have failed; this is the rock upon which as plants grown up in their youth— and arrogance.
