

The Bradford Reporter is published every Tuesday morning by S. W. Alvord at Two Dollars per annum in Advance.

Table with 4 columns: Length, Width, and Price. Rows include 1/4, 1/2, 3/4, and 1 inch dimensions.

S. W. ALVORD, Publisher. VOLUME XXXI. TOWANDA, BRADFORD COUNTY, PA. MARCH 16, 1871. NUMBER 42. $2 per Annum in Advance.

The Bradford Reporter

Give me more friends, or none. This hollow glitter of smiles and words—compliments that mean nothing—protestations of affection as to the friends of the world—invitations that are mere courtesies, uttered because such things are customary, are worthless to me. There is no need of them. It is proper to be civil and courteous to the most indifferent stranger; but why assume familiarity with those who when no reality underlies it? When one feels friendship, the object of that sentiment cannot suffer, and leave our hearts untroubled—cannot be slandered, leaving us unharmed. To see our friend envious, even beyond our own powers, is a great joy to us; to hear that friend applauded is a pleasure. Yet, every day, men who fancy themselves friends, show mean envy of each other's luck; and women, who kiss on both cheeks when they meet, and smile and smile at each other, and whisper to me, "So that, when most women say to me, 'I was talking of you just now!' I wonder only for one is not sincere enough to say it, and the other has been possible to suppress a dry gasp, and to follow the humdrum story of my life; or, failing that, how many times they have been multiplying my age by ten, to prove me older than I confess myself to be. But it is not sincere to praise, and to do so, is to be a charmer; and women all 'sweet.' I like to know from the speech of man or woman that this one is a friend; that, a mere acquaintance. I think warm-hearted people are never generally sincere; and I think that men, who sincerely, all cannot be really ever pleasant. Constant laudation of everybody may be a pleasant form of incivility, but it is incivility; after all, for me. If heaven will help me, I will be sincere. I will not abuse my friends, and I will not praise anyone I do not truly love; I will not kiss women I hate, nor give men loving looks and loving smiles when I do not like them. And as I do into others, may I do unto me, for I deserve no better.

BUSINESS CARDS.

M. TINGLEY, Licensed Auctioneer, Towanda, Pa. All calls promptly attended to.
W. BLACK, General Fire, Life and Accident Insurance Agent, Office at No. 101, Third Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
W. WALLACE KEELER, HOUSE, SIGN AND PRESO PAINTER, Towanda, Sept. 15, 1870-71.
CAMP & VINCENT INSURANCE, Office formerly occupied by Mercer & Co., one door south of Ward House, Towanda, Pa.
R. FOWLER, REAL ESTATE, 141 and 143 Washington Street, New York City.
DRESS-MAKING, MATHIAS BROWN, 101 Third Street, Towanda, Pa.
HAIR WORK OF ALL KINDS, MISS M. E. GARDNER, 101 Third Street, Towanda, Pa.
FRANCIS E. POST, PAINTER, Towanda, Pa. With five years experience, I can give the best of work in painting, staining, glazing, papering, etc.
JOHN DUNFEE, BLACKSMITH, MONROETOWN, Pa.
JOS. PENNYACKER, HAS a sign established in the TOWANDA NEWS, Shop over Rockwell's Store.
OH YES! OH YES! AUCTION! All calls promptly attended to.
C. S. RUSSELL'S, GENERAL INSURANCE AGENCY, TOWANDA, PA.
WOOD TEMPLARS MUTUAL, Association, Towanda, Pa.
THE CONTINENTAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Hartford, Conn.
BLACKSMITHING! I have completed my new brick shop, near my old shop on Main Street.
PATENTS! I have a new and improved method of...
DAYTON & BROTHER, BOWERS IN, Towanda, Pa.
WOOL, HIDES, PELLS, CALF SKINS, FURS, ETC.
W. STEVENS, COUNTY SURVEYOR, Towanda, Pa.
THE UNDERSIGNED HAVE a building for sale...
BRADFORD COUNTY REAL ESTATE AGENCY. H. B. MCKEAN, Real Estate Agent and Town.
NEW FIRM! NEW GOODS AND LOW PRICES!
TRACY & HOLLON, Towanda, Pa.
CHEAP PASSAGE FROM OR TO IRELAND OR ENGLAND.
GOOD MEASURES FOR 50 TONS BEST CATTLE FEED.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

JAMES WOOD, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW, TOWANDA, PA.
HENRY PEET, ATTORNEY AT LAW, TOWANDA, PA.
W. M. FOYLE, ATTORNEY AT LAW, TOWANDA, PA.
GEORGE D. MONTAGNE, ATTORNEY AT LAW, TOWANDA, PA.
W. B. KELLY, DENTIST, OFFICE OVER WOOD'S STORE, TOWANDA, PA.
DR. H. WESTON, DENTIST, OFFICE IN PATTON'S BLOCK, OVER GARDNER'S DRUG AND CHEMIST STORE, TOWANDA, PA.
P. WILLISTON, ATTORNEY AT LAW, TOWANDA, PA.
H. MCKEAN, ATTORNEY AT LAW, TOWANDA, PA.
W. E. CARNOGHAN, ATTORNEY AT LAW, TOWANDA, PA.
J. D. C. DEWITT, ATTORNEY AT LAW, TOWANDA, PA.
JOHN N. CALIFF, ATTORNEY AT LAW, TOWANDA, PA.
C. H. WARNER, Physician and Surgeon, Towanda, Pa.
DR. BEACH, M. D., Physician and Surgeon, Towanda, Pa.
W. A. B. M. PECK'S LAW OFFICE, Towanda, Pa.
BEN. MOODY, M. D., Physician and Surgeon, Towanda, Pa.
JOHN W. MIX, ATTORNEY AT LAW, TOWANDA, PA.
DR. DUSENBERRY, WOULD announce that in compliance with the request of the public, he has removed his office to the corner of Third and Main Streets, Towanda, Pa.
A. KEENEY, COUNTY SURVEYOR, Towanda, Pa.
DOCTOR O. LEWIS, A GRADUATE of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Towanda, Pa.
DR. D. M. SMITH, Dentist, has purchased G. H. Wood's property, including his office, and will continue to practice in the same place.
GREENWOOD COTTAGE, This is a well-located, comfortable cottage, with a fine view of the river, and is for sale at a low price.
WARD HOUSE, TOWANDA, PA.
TEMPERANCE HOTEL, Situated on the corner of Main and Third Streets, Towanda, Pa.
DINING ROOMS, IN CONNECTION WITH THE BARBERY, Near the Court House.
ELWELL HOUSE, TOWANDA, PA.
RUMMERFORD CREEK HOTEL, PETER LANDMISER, Having purchased and thoroughly refitted this old and well-known stand, formerly kept by Robert King, it is now open for the reception of guests.
MEANS HOUSE, TOWANDA, PA.
AMERICAN HOTEL, BRIDGE STREET, TOWANDA, PA.
NEW PLANNING MILL, MATHIAS BROWN, MOLDINGS, ETC., At the old stand of H. B. MCKEAN'S Woolen Factory and Sawmill.
A BEAVY SIX BULL PLANS, NO. 2 AND MATCHING MACHINE, In charge of an experienced mechanic and builder, the public may view the same at the office of the undersigned.
DRIED FRUIT OF ALL KINDS, 500 TONS BEST CATTLE FEED.

Original Poetry.

BEYOND THE MOUNTAIN.
The moon is bright and beautiful,
The air is cool and sweet;
There's a ripple on the river,
And a rustle on the leaved feet:
The line air fills the space,
Far up the hills;
The silver light is gleaming
From the babbling crystal rills.
There's a bird upon the bough—
And I wonder at the wonder,
Pouncing forth its sin in music,
With a steady, glad song flow.
The perfume from the flowers
Seems to fill the pleasant place;
And I wonder at the wonder,
Have a charming, matchless grace.
In drinking in the beauty
Of the scene that now so gleams,
My soul is filled with something
Like the gossamer of dreams;
So bright in the mid-air,
Can ever fade or fly,
Or ever be less far?
Ever, from early childhood,
I've looked up to the hills,
And I wonder at the wonder,
Why I might be permitted
To walk upon the edge
Of that stern old ledge—
Far above the beaming ledge—
If I should not, looking
Down to the scene beyond,
Behold some glorious beauty,
Something so dear and fond,
That my eyes would wander,
And I wonder at the wonder,
But stay there, ever gazing,
Throughout the living day.
There is the golden city,
With its pearly gates, so white—
There is the Jasper wall,
Glimmering in the light;
There is the crystal tower,
And all that is so sweet—
Gold, and Jasper, and silver,
And precious stones, for thee,
March 8, 1871.

Staccellaneous.

A TRIP OVER THE WATER.
"Right hand they leave by cliffs, Craig Forth,
And soon the bulwark of the North,
The towers of the castle, and the towers,
Upon their feet careered look'd down."
At Dowdy's Hotel, King Street, Stirling, we found a well-furnished table good and good attendance, together with positively the most complaisant and attentive of hosts. Our evening meal, in its great variety and abundance, did not fail to remind us of an American restaurant; but the manner of its preparation, and the quality of its ingredients, were entirely different. The smaller adjoining room, from the window of which the body of the unfortunate Earl was thrown, overlooks westward a little garden, still known as that of Mary Queen of Scots, who for some time dwelt here, and now there is just within the outer battlement, with the initials "M. R. 1518," shows where through an aperture she had often gazed from this lofty height upon the magnificent landscape below in the wide view of the day—a view in Great Britain or on the Continent without a duly digested and fluted itemized bill and receipt; the form of the latter being not infrequently "Paid with thanks." Contrary, it is probable, to the general intention, the words might be understood to imply that the thanks came from the guest, and not the innkeeper. There is a peculiar and almost unrivaled beauty and grandeur in the scenery of Stirling and its environs, admirably corresponding to the lofty and heroic associations which attach themselves so abundantly to its localities, as connected with the former history of Scotland, her champions, kings and martyrs. The grand natural and artificial strength of its defenses, its interior location, and the beauty and wealth of its surroundings, made it for many centuries the capital of the ancient Scottish government and the favorite residence of Scottish sovereigns, in the days when the Britons alone flattered the royal banner. The lofty Castle Hill—our former Rock of Stirling—is a position of immense strength 250 feet in height, and reminding one strongly of Quebec, the Gibraltar of America. It finds its counterpart in the "Albion Craig," three miles northward, now surrounded by an imposing monument erected in honor to Sir William Wallace. Similar also is the grand site of the old Castle of Edinburgh, in the western part, descending from the Castle to the rocky precipice; while the city is built at its eastern base and declivity. The southern slope is abrupt, yet admitting the construction of admirable walks and drives along its side, deeply shaded by the foliage of grand old trees. Beyond, in this direction and westward, spreads out the wide and fertile Vale of Monteith, enclosed afar by the blue and lofty hills of the Grampian range. Along the streets leading through the city towards the castle, there are still ancient tenements once occupied by Scottish barons and knights of renown, and one is still pointed out as having been the residence of Mary Stuart. Low down in the intervening valley, amid the waste of an open country, stands the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of Loch beyond the Airbury Castle, the seat of Lord Abercrombie. To the Scottish patriot, the proud eminence of Stirling must be even more than a Bunker Hill; no less than a view from its summit, and among those that of Bruce, when he stood the venerable ruins of Cambracken Abbey, founded by King David I. in 1147. Here, deposited in a stone coffin, were recently found the bones of James III. of Scotland. On the margin of