Selected Poetry.
DEPARTING SCHOOL.
"Quarter of nine! Day's done, do you hear?"
"O'er my book, then; be quick, my dear."
"What's my lunch-box?" "Under the shelf."
"In the place where you left it yourself?"
"I can't say, I don't know where it is!"
"One like for mamma, sweet as my life is!"
"Good, dear! 'Tis all right; keep it!"
"Take your milk!" "All right, I'll try it."
"With a glass of the door they are off, hurry up!"

THE IMPORTANT QUESTION.
What should I do? After discussing this and the other, he said to himself, 'Well, if I can't go where I ought, I will not go at all.' Easy to say—hard to do; because he was just like you—he liked fun just as well as you do, and a spice of mischief too. He must do something. In a self-denial, he said to himself, 'The old system of apprenticeship in the country used to require the boys and journeymen to work until 8 o'clock in the evening in winter time, and after this was done, it was customary to loaf about the corners, streets and the farm, until about 11 o'clock. The morning they went to bed. In the morning it was difficult to get boys and journeymen up to breakfast at 8:30 or 7. Tom got up at 4 o'clock, sometimes at 3, sometimes at 2, and then he went to work. He would wake, and from that time until the others got up he read and studied. His morning candle came in time to be a signal for the villagers who had occasion to start somewhere early. He borrowed money to buy a book, and with borrowed dollars, took a leading newspaper, and in the quiet morning hours took in food for the day's reflection.

This course bore his legitimate fruit; he went to his level, or rather he lowered himself to the level of the neighborhood of the poor, as much respected as any one. I believe he has written two or three books, and in every respect would be considered up to the "Mediocrity." I leave you to imagine all the hardships, if you can get a whole year out of a 6 o'clock in the morning? These two hours, rightly used, will be worth more to you than you can possibly conceive. When you awake, get up instantly. You may bring excuses for the better twenty-two hours, but those two you waste if you sleep them. "Midnight oil" is a hugging. You go to bed in the evening when you are tired, and set your mind to work in the morning, when you are rested. Guard your character in the beginning and in the end, it will guard you.

To tell you the fate of other apprentices, who loafed the evenings and slept the mornings away, is not my intention. Try Tom's course for one year, and you will find your pay in genuine happiness. Your self-respect will strengthen, your mind will develop in harmony with your bodily growth, and your whole being will march along the upward path rejoicing.—N. Y. Tribune.

FORTY-SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE AFRICAN S. S. UNION.
Entirehearted Meetings at the Academy of Arts, at New York, last evening and of the night of last evening. The attendance was large and cheering. The meeting was of increasing interest.

One thousand one hundred and ninety-four new Sunday-school children have been organized, and 49,582 children, heretofore neglected, placed under the training of the Christian Church. 907 other schools, most of them poor, in which were 215,933 children, have been aided by grants of books and periodicals published by the Society.

Twenty-two thousand six hundred and eighty-five conversions are reported from the new schools in this department. The Secretary of the New York department reports continued and increased interest in the various phases of Sunday-school work.

Twenty-nine new schools have been established in the mines of New Jersey, from which many more hopeful conversions are reported. A large number in the destitute places of Pennsylvania have been brought in, and in Ohio and Indiana, the work of the Society has been crowned with encouraging success. Many have been led to Christ, and churches organized from the Union schools.

A new era is dawning upon Michigan. The new settlers are followed by railroads, and Sunday-school missionary labor proves that around the world the first lever of church extension.

Three hundred and seventy-five new schools were organized in the Northwest (Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska), and already 26 churches have grown out of the new settlements. A large number of conversions are reported.

In Missouri and Arkansas 8,741 children have been gathered into 182 new Sunday-schools, and in the South 223 schools were started, and 697 others are now starting. A large number of conversions are reported as the first result.

The work has extended to the Pacific Coast, and 47 new schools have been established.

The Mission of this Society is one of the most important and useful that can engage the labor of those who love the church and the nation. It reaches the young and puts the Bible into their hands, and teaches them to read it, and it does this for those who are unchristianized by any of the sects of the world, and for those who have had the foundation for thousands of the self-sustaining and prosperous churches of our great West.

It has done a work that cannot be measured by the usual standard of a work so catholic in character, and so much needed that it cannot fail to command the confidence of the Christian public. It reaches those whose Jesus honored with his blessing—the children—and it teaches them to be true to God, and to love and to save the lost and neglected ones—the word of life.

All who love Christ and his cause, as well as all who love their country, will rejoice to know that this great National Society, so much honored and blessed, is so useful, and so much needed in the present and for the future, has recently adopted means calculated to increase and extend its usefulness, especially in the ever increasing settlements of the far-reaching West, and among the destitute and neglected ones of the Southern States.

This noble Society is located at 1122 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. An exquisite at a wedding party was given at the residence of Miss M. H. H. on "many happy returns of the occasion."
