BY JOHN G. WEITTIER. He had bowed down to drunkenness. An abject worshipper;
The pulse of manhood's pride had gone Too faint and cold to stir; And he had given his spirit up Unto the humblest thrall, And bowing to the poisoned cup. He gloried in his fall.

There came a change—the cloud rolled of And light fell on his brain-And like the passing of a dream That cometh not again, The shadow of his spirit fled, He saw the gulf before-He shuddered at the waste behind, And was a man once more. He shook the serpent's fold away That gathered round his heart,

As shakes the sturdy forest oak

Its poison vine apart;

He stood erect-returning pride Grew terribly within, And conscience sat in judgment or His most familiar sin. The light of intellect again Along his pathway shone And reason, like a monarch, stood Upon its golden throne; The honored and the wise once more Within his presence came -

And lingered oft on lovely lips His once forbidden name. There may be glory in the might That treadeth nations down-Wreaths for the crimson warrior, Pride for the kingly crown; But glorious in that triumph hour The disenthralled shall find When evil passion boweth down Unto a god-like mind.

THE RAGE FOR PALSE DIAMONDS The Tribune calls attention to the mania that displays itself in an exhibition of bogus dismonds on the person. After telling us that it is not uncommon to see diamonds - or what purport to be such—in the ears of shop-girls, or in the bosom-fronts of stable-boys, and that the consequence is that this class of jewelry, expensive when real and gaudy when false, has been given up by the majority of honest folks, pearls being worn instead, the Tribune adds: Artificial diamonds are made of a peculiar glass called strass. This glass has a property of refracting light in the same way as the diamond and its manufacture has been carried to such perfection that an ordinary observer cannot distinguish gems made of it from real diamonds.
