Selected Poetry. THE ORGAN BLOWER.

Devoutest of my Sunday friends,

The patient Organ blower bends;

A moment lost, the next half seen,

His head above the scanty screen,

Still measuring out his deep salsams

No priest that prays in gilded stole,

No sister, fresh from holy vows-

His large obeisance puts to shame

The proudest genuficeting dame,

Whose Easter bonnet low descends

With all the grace devotion lends.

O, brother with the supple spine,

How vain the finger on the keys!

Another's art may shape the tone,

The breath that fills it is thine own

hix days the silent Memnon waits

Behind his temple's folded gates!

But when the seventh day's sunshine falls

Through rainbowed windows on the walls

He breathes, he sings, he shouts, he fills

The quivering air with rapturous thrills;

And all the alumbering echoes wake

(Some stranger, fumbling far astray

The preacher from the Bible text

To find the lesson for the day);

He tells us truths too plainly true,

And reads the service all askew,—

Beforehand in the service book.

How much we owe those bows of thine!

Without thine arm to lend the breeze.

Though all unmatched the player's skill

So humbly stoops, so meekly hows;

To have a rich man's mortgaged soul;

Through quavering hyms and panting per

I see his figure sink and rise, depth to give them the proper shape. The thimble is then trimmed, polished, and indented around its outer surface with a number of little holes, by means of a small wheel. It is then converted into steel by the cementation process, tempered, scoured, and brought to a blue color. A thin sheet of gold is then introduced into the interior, and fastened to the steel by means of a polished steel mandril. Gold leaf is then applied to the outside, and attached to it by pressure, the edges being fastened in a small groove made to receive them. The timble is then ready for use. Those made in this manner do not wear out, as so many ordinary gold thimbles do, but will last for years. The gold coating, if cut away by necdles, may be easily replaced, but the steel is of an excellent quality, and very durable.
