The war of argument lasted nearly a fort night. The distinguished connsel for the defence urged their cause with all the earnestness and skill of which they were masters. Upon the question of the jurisdiction of the Court in ases where special crimes were charged the Court was divided, and the matter referred to for years, has for several years past the Supreme Court for decision. Upon the other points raised their motion was overruled and were compelled to go to trial.

The first case called was that of William Hayes Mitchell, an ex-captain in the Confederthan ordinary intelligence. He was charged with having conspired with others to injure and ppress certain persons for having voted the Radical ticket at the election in 1870, and with having been present on a raid when the Klan of which he was a member murdered a noted negro Radical named Jim Williams,

When arraigned before the Court he plead not guilty." The first witnesses called by the resecution were ex-members of the Ku-Klux-Klan, who had turned States'-evidence. Afterward the negroes who had been whinned, ont raged and threatened were put upon the stand. The objects and purposes of the order were first shown, then the particular acts performed in carrying them out, and the prisoners' conection therewith. The raid upon Jim Williams was charact c and will show how these exceditions were rganized and carried out. Jim Williams seems in have been a man of considerable intelligenc and to have possessed a clearer idea of his rights and their value than most of his class. For months the Klan had been raiding through the length and breadth of York county, mnr. ering and whipping, and had so far succeeded in their purpose as to make large numbers of the negroes foreswear their political faith and promise to become "good Democrats." Bu amid all this terrorism Jim Williams stood on

In the summing up, the argument of Mr Stanberry was a disappointment. Beyond one or two good points that he raised, it was unforthy of his great reputation. It was a speech full of bittorness, evasions, and pettiloggery. Reverdy Johns n, on the contrary, did himself full justice, but he seemed to be addressing the country at large more than the jury in the box. The worth ex-Minister evidently cared not forget his favorite role of "the guardian of the Constitution." He had much to say in laudation of the heroes of the first revolution, but very little of the heroes of the second, unless we except those who fought those on " the other side.

An action has been commenced in the U.S. Circuit Court against Mark M. Pomeroy, for alleged breach of promise of marriage. The complaint, filled by Commissioner Shields with the Clerk of the Court states that the plaintiff, Miss Sadie E.V. ilk-Anson, of New Haven, Ct. became ac quainted with the defendant in 1862; that he subsequently solicited her hand in marriage, and that she consented to accept him. The complaint further states, that Miss Wilkinson has received many offers of marriage from various suitors, and that she lost the opportunity to become a bride by
