LIFE AND TIME.

Life is so chesp and yet so dear,

We prize it, but we scorn it too,

And plod our round from year to year.

With little thought to hope or do;

Each day brings fretful cares and toil,

And sorrows come and joys depart,

And we grow old with weary toil,

Or else from listlessness of heart. What matters which ? what matters how ?

Time beedeth not our still moods. But stamps its signet on our brow

The incessant whirling of the wheel,

Nor heed the traces that declare

We are not now what once we were

"Do this," it says, and we obey ;

The world has worn us to its ways:

There is no freedom in our praise,

And little courage left to pray.

At moments with a sudden pain,

We grasp and cry for youth again,

And wonder where the joy has gone,

When Love with Life walked hand in hand,

When 'twas a boundless blizs to dare

The mighty peaks that bound the land

Where wisdom dwelis screnoly fair.

And youthful dreams are fair domains,

And happy thoughts are golden grains

The dreams are gone, the rapinre past Each year moves calmly like the last,

Creeps laggard-like along the shore,

We tread the footsteps of our sires,

With petty aims and mean desires,

There's a hush in the wintry air,

There's a chill in the sunshine fair ;

There's a song of a life that is sung,

There is pleasure without an alloy;

There's a voice that will call us above.

Miscellaneous.

There's a sadness in every foot-fall,

And idly act our little part, Like puppets fashioned for a show.

The sea that foamed with deafening roar,

Which we were wont to feed upon ;

In city life or solitades ; and we grow old ; yet scarcely feel
