But if the circumstances of his going there were fully known, it might relieve their minds somewhat. It has been said that Mrs. Lincoln urged him to go to the theatre against his will. This is not so On the contrary, she tried persuade him not to go, but he insisted. I have this statement from Mrs Lincoln herself. He said: "I must have a little rest. A large procession of excited overjoyed people will visit me to night. My arms are now lame shaking hands with the multitude, and the people will pull me to pieces." He went to the theater, not because he was interested in the play, has died, his widow, if unmarried, or seemed to take no notice of what guardian duly appointed, shall be ************

In the fourth instalment of The Poet at the Breakfast Table in the April number of the Atlantic, Dr. Holmes says a good many witty and wise about women, which might be read with pleasure and profit at the conventions over which Mrs. Julia Ward Howe delights to preside. For instance:—

HOLMES ON WOMEN.

A woman, notwithstanding she is been needed most urgently, are the the best of listeners, knows her business, and it is a woman's business to please. I don't say that it is not her business to vote, but I do say that the woman who does not please, is a er remain but the silent testimony of false note in the harmonies of nature. the rocks, forests of luxurious growth | She may not have youth beauty, or covered every lowly valley, crowned even manners; but she must have every inland lake, an fringed the low something in her voice or expression shores of the great oceans.
