Horizon Insects.

Young cabbage plants, after being transplanted, are frequently cut off at the stem by a black grub, which lodges in the ground. However, if the insect is not destroyed, the root of the plants, cut off, and you will find the grub a quarter of an inch under the surface, and kill it. If it is not there, it will be on the plant next to it, and near by there will be another. They are always in pairs and near to each other. There is a small black flea in vast numbers, which eats off the leaves of young cabbages, both when they have come from seeds and after being transplanted. If the plants are lightly dusted over with fresh slaked lime for two mornings, while they are wet with dew, the lime will kill or drive them off and the plants will thrive. There is a greenish, heavy louse that attacks cabbage when half, or nearly full grown, frequently covering the whole plant. A dusting of fresh lime, for two mornings, over the plants while wet with dew, will kill all the insects. A large, green grub, with black bands around its body, which devours the leaves of carrots, celery, parsnips parsley. It is slow in motion, and can be gathered with the hands and killed. All kinds of fruit trees should have their stems washed now with a strong solution of carbolic soap and water. It will keep off the cut-worms, and if the heads of the trees are syringed with a weaker solution of the carbolic soap and water, insects will not be apt to attack them. Another syringing of the heads of the trees, after the fruits are set, may keep off the "curculio" from plum and peach trees. The cause of failures in keeping off insects is that remedies are not prepared in a sufficiently long time. A man standing upon a pair of steps ten feet high can syringe over trees twenty feet high. W. E., in the Journal of the Farm.

FEEDING POTATOES TO HORSES.

In Germany where potatoes are so much cheaper than grain, the experiment has been repeatedly tried of feeding horses upon them—at least, in part; and this we understand, has proved quite successful. In one instance five four horse teams were kept at work in good condition on a days ration of twenty horses of one and one half hundred weight of hay; eight bushels of potatoes, fifty pounds of meal, and a liberal allowance of chopped straw. The potatoes were steamed, mashed and mixed with meal while hot, and then covered up and allowed to remain for a time, during which they undergo a slight fermentation and evolve a quantity of carbonic acid. The chopped straw was worked in just before feeding. This trial was continued for more than four months, and found to agree with the horses, while at the same time it proved satisfactory in point of economy. As this food must be sweet and clean, great care is necessary to prevent the vessels in which it is kept from becoming sour.

SOWN CORN FOR FODDER.

There is no question that farmers have a good deal of solidifying every year as to the question of sufficient feed for stock, and when, as was the case last year, the grass crop is short—the inquiry is for some substitute for hay. We recommend the sowing of corn. Two crops of it can be raised on the same piece of land. The southern corn will give a larger yield than any other. The most important part is the curing for fodder. We understand that Mr. Wakefield of Pittsfield has invented a plan which he expects to secure a patent for curing and ventilating. It is a simple contrivance and consists merely in erecting a stack pole with holes bored through it, about four feet apart, being shorter as it approaches the top. The corn is placed upon the stack, the cross poles being inserted at intervals, which keeps it up so the air circulates through. It can be cured so as to make it fresh and sweet for food for any length of time. It is a good feed for milch cows and stock of all kinds like it, and no other yields so as to pay better with a little expense and trouble.—The Homestead.

IN SMALL GARDENS.

In small gardens, in the absence of drilling machines, such seed as turnips, &c., may be dropped rapidly along the drills without stopping, by nailin or screwing a small tin cup to the lower end of a walking cane, and making a hole in the bottom just large enough to allow the seed to escape. Walk along the side of the drill, shaking the tin cup over it by means of the stick handle, and it will drop fast and well. With a proper sized hole, peas may be dropped fast and uniformly. It is well to make several holes of different sizes and plug them all up but the one.—Country Gentleman.

QUARING PLUM PUDDING.

Take slices of light bread, spread thin with butter, and lay in a pudding tin layers of this bread and raisins, till within an inch of the top. Add five eggs, well beaten, and a quart of milk, and pour over the pudding; salt and spice to taste. Bake it twenty or twenty-five minutes, and eat with liquid sauce. Before using the raisins, boil them in a little water, and put it all in.

BREAKFAST ROLLS.

Four sufficient quantity boiling water on one pint cornmeal, make a thick gruel; then let it stand till nearly cold; then add salt and one large spoonful of yeast; mix in wheat flour until it is still dough; knead it well, and then let it stand in a warm place for seven or eight hours to rise; when light make into rolls, and bake one hour.
