She said never a word except "You're an age An ass-an arg-iduous teaser !" But when we were married, I found to my ruth The stammering lady had spoken the truth; For often, in ob lons dudgeon, She'd say—if I ventured to give her a log. In the way of reproof-" You're a dog - dog-dog-A dog-a dog-matic curmudgeon." And once when I said, "We can hardly afford This extravagant style with our moderate board," And hinted we ought to be wiser,

She looked, I assure you, exceedingly blue,

And fretfully fried, "You're a Jew-Jew-Jew-Jew-A very Jewil-dicious adviser." Again when it appened that wishing to shirk some rather undersant and ardnous work, I begged her togo to a neighbor;

She wanted to know why I made such a fuss
And sauc'y said, "You're a cuss—cuss—cuss— You were always p-cuss-tomed to labor!

Out of temper at last with the insolent dame, And feeling the woman was greatly to blame To scold me instead of careasing, I mimicked her speech, like a churl as I am, And angrily said, "You're a dam -dam-dam A dam-age instead of a blessing!".

"I come," he said, to ask of you that I may seek the hand of your daughter. The Judge was agreeably surprised.

He had fanclied that of late the youth had been growing cold toward his daughters. "My dear doy," said he, "between you and me there need be no beating about the bush. I should be both proud and happy to welcome you as my son. Which of the two is it?"

"Of the two?" repeated Roland. "Ah; is it Isabel or Bertha?" "Neither, sir, it is Kate I want." "Kate!" cried the old man in blank astonishment. But quickly a galad light danced in his eyes.

"Yes, Judge, your Kate is the woman I want if I can win her." "But, my dear boy, how in the world did you manage, to find my pearl, my ruby, among my household iewels? Where and when have you discovered the priceless worth of that sweet child?" "I discovered it first in the kitchen. Judge: I first fell irrevocably and truly in love with her when I found her with her white arms bare, making bread. I have known her bester since. It is your Kate I want." "God bless you, my boy. Go and win her if you can. And be sure you

Roland went away, and half an hour afterward, the supernal light that danced in his eyes told his history of sucess. And Kate, when closely questiond; confessed that the first flame of real love which burned in her bosom for Rowland Archworth, was kindled by the deep and true element of manhood which he had displayed on that early morning in the kitchen. Of course Mrs. Lanark was willing, though she was surprised at the young man's choice. Isabel and Bertha were disappointed; but since, at best, only one of them could have won the prize, they concluded on the whole, that it was well as it was. They loved their sister, and were thus enabled to claim the wealthy banker for a brother-in-

law. As for Roland and Kate, their happiness was complete. Of all the accomplishments which his wife possesses, the husband is chiefly proud of that which enables her to be in deed as well as in name, "the mistress of

> THE WOMEN FOR GRANT.-It is a significant fact, says a distinguished contemporary, that nearly all the leading women who have been prominent for years in political and intallectual circles, are working zealously for the re-election of General Grant.
