Miscellaneous.

HOW I MAKE SOFT SOAP.—I keep my ashes dry, and when put in the hopper preparatory to making soap, I have from a half to 1 peck of unslacked lime put in with the ashes. Before putting the grease in, I swing the kettle off the fire and let it hang a few moments. If there is any potash in it, I take a shovel and take it out. For if there is much potash in it will not make good soap. I pack the ashes well, adding water enough to dampen them. Then I put three or four buckets of water each day for two or three days, and I think it sufficiently soaked. And lastly I pour on boiling water to run the lye off. As soon as I have enough run off to commence boiling, I put my kettle over the fire, and boil the lye as fast as it will boil, still keeping more lye as it boils down. In this way I continue for a whole day. By evening it will probably be sufficiently strong to eat a feather in passing it three times across the liquor. Then put my grease in (all I think it will eat), still boiling as fast as I can without its running over. If it runs the grease all up I add more. I never leave my kettle to hang over the fire all night. In the morning if there are any scraps of grease that are not eaten up, I boil again for an hour or two, and if they do not dissolve I take them out. Then I take a teacupful of the soap and cool it a little while to coot if it is soft, if there be no lye under and it appears free from grease I pour it into tubs off, and hang another kettle of lye. Managing in this way I generally can make from six to eight tubs or gallons of nice white soap in two days, and often in one day in a hurry. I think by pursuing this plan for a similar one, any one can make a strong, nice soap.—Farmer's Boy.

THE Common Terms of existence which most young ladies is to get as much pleasure out of life as possible. This is paramount to duty in a telling way. Their chief idea of true pleasure consists is to secure as much male admiration as possible and to triumph over many female rivals. Hence some of their eccentricities and follies. They have small regard for any one but themselves. They enjoy eating and drinking, and are not ashamed to do either publicly or privately. Indeed, they rather delight in setting the ordinary usages of societies at defiance, for they are snobbish and insufferably proud. They would laugh at words at the idea of love in a cot, and have an hesitation in roughly upbraiding the aspirations of him to be devoted. They do not profess to believe in a Supreme at any very great extent; indeed, they are profoundly worldlings.

Such girls shine for a few years. The "fast" ones of the set in which they move are loud in their praises, and court their society. But they be not many. They are passed over for more extravagant and quieter creatures. Their admirers argue justly that it would need a millionaire to support them. By-and-by then they fade, their vivacity becomes stale, and their admirers few and far between. If they do not elope with a coachman or the footman, they often do what is, perhaps, quite as disappointed women.

TO MOTHER THIS.—No heart is insensible to words of praise, or the sweetly smile of approbation; and children are utterly above being affected by censure or blame. Children are peculiarly sensitive in this respect, and nothing can discourage a child more than a spirit of incessant fault finding; and perhaps nothing can exert a more baneful influence upon both parent and child. If your little one through the day has been pleasant and you say to him, "My son, you have been good to-day, and it makes me very happy;" and if, with more than a usually affectionate embrace you say, "Good night, my dear child," a throb of satisfied feeling fills his heart, and he resolves on always earning such approval. If your grown son, or daughter, have accomplished some sufficient piece of work, rendering you essential assistance; or have climbed some step in the daily drill of study; or have acquired some new accomplishment, or added grace; or bet ter than all, have gained the victory over some bad habit or besetting sin — acknowledge it, see it, praise them for it. Let them see, by your added tenderness, the deep joy and comfort it gives you. Thus you will create a great many incentives to right conduct and lay a broad foundation for a character which shall be redolent with succulent fruit and fragrant blossoms.

NOT UPON THE PROGRAMME.—One Saturday evening, during the performance of "The Lady of Lyons" at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester, England, a singular interruption took place, which fairly upset the gravity of the house. Just before the crisis in the fifth act, when Pauline is about to sign the marriage contract, and Claude Melnotte is preparing to assert his prior claim, the property-man's cat made its appearance upon the scene, and frisked across the stage in a highly grotesque manner. Of course the apparition was in ridiculous contrast to the claptrap language. The animal suddenly re-appeared at the opposite wing, with an outstretched tail, and exhibiting other symtoms of alarm. After scampering twice or thrice across the stage, and probably finding all the places of exit occupied by "supers," intent upon its capture, it looked for safety on the other side of the footlights, and cleared the orchestra and stalls at a bound, alighting on the shoulder of an elderly lady in the pit, to whom it quietly surrendered.

NEGATIVE KINDNESS.—Do the doctors known that half the wives in the world die of this complaint? "He never spoke an unkind word to his wife." Yes, but did he remember, now and then, to speak a kind one? Did he have any sympathy for her bodily or mental ails? Or was he blind and deaf to both, treating them with that cutting indifference which in time chills the most loving heart, and silences its throbs for ever. Men are verily guilty in this regard. They take a young girl from the warm atmosphere of a loving, cheerful home, and after a few brief weeks of devotion, leave her to battle, single-handed, with new cares and duties, and to bear sickness with what courage she may, and go their ways into the tangled paths of life, without a second thought of the responsibilities they are shirking, or the solemn vows they have really broken.

EXTRAVAGANCE.—Said a young husband, whose business speculations were unsuccessful, "My wife's silver tea-set, the bridal gift of a rich uncle, doomed me to financial ruin. It involved a hundred unexpected expenses, which in trying to meet, have made me the bankrupt I am." His experience is the experience of many others, who, less wise, do not know what is the goblin of the house, working its destruction.

A sagacious father of great wealth exceedingly mortified his daughter by ordering it to be printed on her wedding cards, "No presents except those adapted to an income of $1,000." Said he, "You must not expect to begin life in the style I am able, by many years of labor, to indulge; and I know of nothing which will tempt you to try it more than the well-intentioned but pernicious gifts of rich friends." Such advice to a daughter was timely. If other parents would follow the same plan, many young men would be spared years of incessant toil and anxiety; they would not find themselves on the downward road, because their wives had worn their salary, or expended it on the appointments of the house. The faith of the poor man who found a linch-pin, and felt himself obliged to make a carriage to fit it, is the fate of the husband who finds his bride in the possession of gold and silver valuables, and no large income to support the owner's gold and silver style.

ANONYMOUS ALMSGIVING.—There are two mysterious individuals in London who appear to be past finding out. One of them is known only as "H. G." and the other as "D. N." A few weeks ago, just as the East London Hospital for children and women was about to sell the stocks representing its only reserve fund, in order to raise money, this mysterious "H. G." deposited in a bank one thousand pounds to the credit of the institution, this being the third time that he has done the same thing, and always just at the moment when the hospital directors were most sorely embarrassed for funds with which to carry on their charitable work. They do not know who "H. G." is, and so they thank him through the newspapers. "D. N." is an equally mysterious personage, who has been anonymously giving his substance in thousand pound doses to the Alexandra Orphanage for infants. He, too has repeated the process three times. This is an excellent way of surrounding one's self with mystery, and we heartily commend it to any wealthy lovers of sensation who may happen to live among us. The idea is borrowed from a quaint old book which says, "When thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth."
