"'Excuse me, Estelle, and,' and he looked laughingly on the beautiful temptress. I cannot in that, but with 'pure, cold water' will drink it with all my heart.'

"The shadow of a frown was on her smooth brow for a moment, and theu, still holding the glass so that the light shone through and increased its ruby glow, she said, with a mocking laugh:

"Ab, Edwin, I fear what people say is true: that you fear the influence of the first glass.'

"At this unwomanly retort, a dread silence fell upon the little circle; and Edwin, his face flashed with indignation, and defiant in his own strength, took the goblet from the "It was a good match in every unresisting hand, and, draining it to its dregs, said quickly :

"When next you hear that assertion, Estelle, you can give your own experience as proof of its falsity,' and he hastily left the group.

"Much to the surprise of his friends, "It is not my purpose to tell! Es elle's feelings; her triumph was brief but it was complete. "Edwin left the room and, passing out into the porch, such a host of remoroeful feelings swept over his soul that he wished for a moment he could die; for no sooner had he tasted the wine than all his old slumbering appetite was aroused, and now it clamored for its old food like a cage of hungry beasts. There seemed to be no other way of appeasing it. He fought it as though it bad been a human foe. At one moment he re-
