DIED. Alice, twin daughter of Luther L. a. Keeney, aged 18 years and 8 days. They are parted, yes, they're parted, No'er again on earth to meet,

Though in life together started, One is first at Jesus' feet. Closely clinging to each other, Like the tendrils of a vine, Gently round the hearts of others Friendship's chain they firmly twinc. Youngest daughters in the home nest, Budding talents brightly shine; Pride and pets of brother eldest,

Jewels in the family mine. But our casket's rudely broken, And the gem away is hid; You have yet one loving token, Though you've closed a coffin-lid. Hope comes to you, softly whispers, "Tho' your loved one hence is borne, You'd a duplicate of sisters, " One in feature, voice and form."

And methinks the thought is cheering, As you gaze on Eva's face, Memory at your call appearing Emma's likeness there will trace. Day by day you saw her languish: Very hard you thought to bear; To her other self what anguish; Much she needs your kindest care, Nevermore can her fair fingers Lightly sweep melodious keys;

Mid augelic choirs she lingers, Golden harps in lieu of these. Fondest sister, check thy weeping; Though you loved her more than all: Jesus says "she's only sleeping. And will waken at His call." Though on earth you cannot meet her, Humbly kneel and kess the rod,

As you promised, strice to greet her Very near the throne of God. KEENEY-In Tuscarora, Feb 10, 1873, Eva Los, twin day hter of Luther L and Arlet a Keeney, aged 18 years, 5 months and 1 day. Once again the home's invaded By the icy touch of death; Like a tender plant she faded, Swept by winter's frosty breath By one stroke the chain was severed

Pierced by an unerring dart; By one blow the links are welded, Joining lives thus rent apart. "Sister, come!" a spirit calleth. "Here a mansion waits for thee": At the Saviour's feet she falleth-"Come and worship here with me. "Yes, I go; the world's receding; Father, here I cannot stay-

Jesus, too, for me is pleading ; Soon his call I must chey." One more vacant place by mother, In the church yard one more mound; Hush thy murmur, sister, brother! Lonely bird its mate has found. Yet there comes a ray to brighten, To which I can point you now : , May its beams your s orrow lighten.

While submissively you bow: For again they're re-united; Nothing now their souls can part : Ne'er again that union blighted-Blessed thought to mourning heart They are clothed in robes of glory. As they soar with eager wing, Listening to redemption's story,

Chanting songs the angels sing. TOWANDA MARKETS mions. P bush. 1 5 WEIGHTS OF GRAIN.—Wheat 60 lb.; Corn 56 lbs.
