Is going home; ah, happy fate." We homeward share her lonely ride, Thro' the dark night, so cold and chill; Dim valleys pass-up mountain side-Till morning breaks, so white and still. We leave her there in cot so small-Among the mists of morning bright, With Him who watcheth over all.

E'en when around are clouds and night As homeward turn we on our way, The sun with glory ushers Day; The hills around are tipped with gold, Before us Nature doth unfold Her face so grand, but late so gray; The mist is rising-clears away. And like the man doth sadness fly.

While o'er us smiles the bright blue sky. Ah! happy, careless hours we passed, Our life was early morning bright, Our sweet spring-time, too bright to last; The cross-roads of our life in sight: You went your way, and I went mine. And summers pass, and snow-wreaths twing Long years have gone and impress bear Of smiles and tears, and love and care.

THOUGHTS ON A NEW BABY. 20Y A LAD. Yes, there's another of 'em up stars now. I know it, because pa told me I must be quied and mustn't play ball, nor ask Willie Smart to come and play leap frog, with me. Then there's a cross nuise, that's always scalding me for getting in her way, no matter where I get. Bes des, Miss Gadall was here to day, and patted me on the back, saying my nose was another degree out of joint; but I know better, for this is the third time she has told me so, and it is no more out of joint than it ever was. She's a hateful, geggleeyed old maid-that's what she is: I saw it, teo. It's got a little, round, red head, without any hair, with great deep wrinkles, instead of eves, and when it eries it opens its mouth as though it ment to swallow itself. Pa helped me upon the side of the bed, and told me to kiss my pretty little sister; and when I woulden't and called it a horrid ugly thing, he said I was a naughty boy, and then the nurse shook me, and said I ought to be ashamed. I didn't get to kiss my ma at all. I knew better than to try it, for once, when another baby came, I climbed up the bed, and put my arms around her neck, hugged and kissed her, but all the time I had my knee on the baby's head; so I was whipped and put in my crib without any supper, because I didn't know it was there. Little Annie thinks it's nice to have a new sister, but she was the, baby before, and don't know anything about it. I can remember long, long ago, ma used to, call me her "sweet little darling," and pajumped me on his foot and said I was "fine fellow," and Aunt Julia declared that I was a "perfect little angil;" but then Tom came and all. my pretty toys were given to him. anie he was the baby, and I was cuffed and scolded by everybody, cept grandma, and she's good to me yet though there's been two new ones given. I wonder where the Lord sends them: I wish he wouldn't send any more too our
