ESF We have often wondered why it was that in many rural districts the roads were all wed to become so miserably bad in the spring and fall. Is it possible that the fathers are so illiberal and narrow-minded as to fail to support commissioners who will make good roads at the risk of creating considerable road tax? Every man who would feel the tax feels immessurably more the loss occasioned by proace argons and worn-out horses. Let the people of every township insist upon their condition, and we indertake to say that the re- sult will justify the experiment.	CORSER & Coons have just re enved a lot of first-class Trunks.
