BEECHER ON A HIGHER LIPE. "It must have struck everybody, said Mr. Beecher, in a Plymouth prayer-meeting, that a great change was wrought in the Disciples. They can scarcely be said to have been men of ordinary intelligence to begin with even in their day. But when the Holy Ghost entered them they became so powerful as to turn the world upside down."

vorld upside down."

The lesson taught by this, to Mr. Beecher's mind, is that Christ's love can make the same transformation in any Christian, and that few have any conception of the higher spiritual plane to which they might rise.

A brother said that Mr. Beecher had done well enough as far as he had gone, but he had left the subject half it was the workmen of Germany who disposed of. The important point was how to reach that higher plane.
