He was remarkable for his business capacity

He was remarkable for his business capacity; few men could equal him in managing and directing a large number of men engaged in different kinds of business. It was indeed almost wonderful to see with what quickness, facility and ease he would do this. He was also remarkable for his indomitable will and untiring energy and perseverence. The word 'fail' had no place in his vocabulary. If misfortune overtook him or adversity came and thwarted his plans these were only an incentive to a stronger and bolder effort. He loved to make money, and he loved int as well to anend it. He was
