FRUIT TREE BUSINESS .- Mr. Editor: With your permission, I will briefly address, through your paper, those of your readers who are interested in horticulture. We have been so often and shametully swindled by nursery agents, that we have learned to put but little confidence in any except, those whom, from personal acquaintance or some trustworthy assurances, we are convinced are honest. The nurserymen are generally reliable and anxious to do a fair pusiness, but the fault is for the most part with dishonest agents, who in many cases buy trees, rogardless of variety, wherever they can be got cheapest, and then name and label them according to the orders to be filled. The unreliability of agents on the one hand, and the trouble of buying directly from nurse-For It is not generally known that generally in this section from supplying their H. C.
