As the time approaches for meeting of our State Convention, and under the new constitution several new officers are to be selected, we deem it our duty to present the name of a candidate for the office of Lieutenant Governor, whose candidacy will awaken the enthusiasm and well that position.

No one can deny, after year by year rolling up large Republican majorities, this portion of the State should be recognised, and we present a candidate we believe unexceptionable-Gen. HENRY J. MADILL.

In the latter part of the war he was Brevetted Brigadier-General, and while leading his Brigade was dangerously wounded. At the close of the war he was made Brevet Major-General. His record as a soldier is too well known in this county and in Northern Pennsylvania to need comment. We believe the announcement of his name will be sufficient to rally the whole of this part of the State in his support Certain it is, in our county,-without casting disparagement on others,

Mr. Cameron, in advocating the adoption of his substitute, said the country was deficient in banking facilities, so necessary to transact the business of an energetic, industrious people. Being a practical man, he looked at these things from a practical standpoint. He had not heard a single business man say we had enough curren y. The national banking system had done much good, and should be extended. His substitute was designed to satisfy the demand for more money without causing a shock to capital aircady intered in good faith.

The law now gare a fixed amount of currency, allowing no greater abundance of money at one, time than at another, yet it was a well known fact that at some seasons of the year the people want more money than at others. This fixed amount of currency was a terror to honest men and a jubilee to speculators. The increase of national banks would enable the United States to resume specie payment sooner
