The Grangers' Ten Commandments.

I.

Thou shalt love the Grange with all thy heart and with all thy soul, and thou shalt love thy brother Grangers as thyself.

II.

Thou shalt not suffer the name of thy Grange to be evil spoken of but shalt severely chastise the wretch who speaks with contempt.

III.

Remember, Saturday is Granger day. On it thou shalt set aside thy hoe, and rake, and sewing machine, and wash thyself, and appear before thy Master in the Grange with smiles and songs, and hearty cheer. On the fourth week thou shalt not appear empty handed, but shalt surely bring a pair of ducks, a turkey roasted with fire, a cake baked in the oven, and pies and fruits in abundance for thy harvest feast. So shalt thou eat and be merry, and "freights and fares" shall be remembered no more.

IV.

Honor thy Master, and all who sit in authority over thee, that the days of the Grange may be long in the land which Uncle Sam has given thee.

V.

Thou shalt not go to law.

VI.

Thou shalt not burn thy straw, but shalt surely stack it for thy cattle in winter.

VII.

Thou shalt not do business on "tick." Pay as thou goest as much as in thee lieth.

VIII.

Thou shalt support the Grangers Bank; for thus it becometh thee to fulfill the laws of business.

IX.

Thou shalt by no means have thy life insured in the Grangers Life Insurance Company, [Col. Colman's, the great American orator and Democratic candidate for Governor of Missouri,] that thy wife and little ones may have friends when thou art cremated and gathered unto thy father's.

X.

Thou shalt not have any Jewish middlemen between thy ranch and Liverpool, to fatten on thine honest toil; but shalt surely charter thine own ships, and sell thine own brains. This is the last great commandment. On this hangs all the law and profits. And if there be any others, they are these: Choke monopolies, break up rings, vote for honest men, fear God and make money. So shalt thou prosper; and sorrow and hard times shall flee away.

IMPROVING DAIRY STOCK. — Every succeeding year finds the farmers increasing their dairy stock, laying out their land so as to best suit its successful management, and each year developing greater interests in the subject of the best breeds of cattle and the best modes of managing them. With dairy stock, it would almost appear as if there was no such thing as standing still. Unless improvement is aimed at constantly by weeding out those members of the herd which are getting past useful age, or after sufficient trial, are found to be inferior milkers, and by occasionally introducing fresh; and if possible, superior blood, through the agency of the sire, there is danger of retrogressing. A herd on the retrograde is neither profitable or creditable to the owner, yet without care in breeding and selection, the farmer will find his stock decreasing in stamina and consequently less productive. No bad milker should have a permanent place in a herd kept principally for the produce of the dairy. To keep such a cow is simply to lose money wilfully, her keeping costing just as much as the best milker on the place, and the trouble she occasions quite as much as that given by the animal which gives double the amount of produce. It may be difficult for years to have every cow in a herd good, yet the herd may be so improved by judicious selections as to have very good cows.

In a stock of a dozen cows we will suppose there are a few indifferent milkers.—By testing the milk of these cows carefully, and ascertaining the amount of butter and cheese they produce, to be under the average of what might fairly be expected from the care bestowed on each, it is certainly economy for the owner to keep such farrow, and at the end of the season dry them off, and with some feeding get them in shape for the butcher, and get rid of them without any further loss. To fill their places, let half a dozen heifers come into the dairy, and select from them to take the place of those found unprofitable.

Such a course, constantly followed for a number of years, would make more first class milkers in our dairies and be more profit to the owners, while the herd would gain a character and reputation in the district for good qualities. Much can be done to improve dairy stock by holding over the offspring of those cows which have proved themselves first class milkers, and breeding only from those with a view to getting into a permanent strain of milkers, as far as they may be done in a limited time.

But it does not always follow that a heifer whose mother was an excellent milker, will in return inherit her mother's good qualities in this respect, but when she is a descendent of a celebrated pail-filler, the probabilities are altogether in her favor, that she will possess in a high degree the good qualities of her race. By following such a line of policy as indicated, and taking proper care to secure males of noted milking stock, our dairy stock may be greatly improved, and, to say the least, far superior to the bad selection of common stock, bred with no reference to milking qualities.—Prairie Farmer.

ROAD DUST IN THE FARM YARD.—The summer season is the proper time to get road dust for various purposes, such as for destroying lice on cattle, for the poultry to dust themselves in, &c. For cattle, when they begin to rub themselves, or swing their caudle appendages, or lick their backs, one may begin to surmise there is some surface application necessary, and perhaps nature's remedy is the best.

When the cows are dry take some dust and sprinkle it over them—rub it on where it is not likely to stay. If they have grubs rub them well with it, and watch the result. Dust, one must remember, is earth freed from moisture, and it must be kept so. Keep it in barrels, and also in a dry place.

For poultry make a bottom of refuse boards nailed on stringers, say 4 by 6 feet square, and on the outer edges nail narrow strips 4 or 6 inches wide, to keep the dust from being worked off. A roof is needed to keep the dust dry. Add dust to it occasionally, and see how readil they will take to it.

APPLETONS' AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA.

NEW REVISED EDITION.

Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new type, and illustrated with Several Thousand engravings and Maps.

The work originally published under the title of THE NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA, was completed in 1863, since which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled THE AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA.

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge, has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movements of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and their fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and refinement of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.

In preparing the present edition for the press, it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possible period, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the newest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress of political and historical events.

The work has been begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources for carrying it on to a successful termination.

None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, forming in fact a new Cyclopædia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far greater pecuniary expenditure, and with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition, have been added, not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give greater lucidity and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their artistic excellence; the cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopædia, and worthy of its high character.

This work is sold to Subscribers only, payable on delivery of each volume. It will be completed in sixteen large octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerous colored Lithographic Maps.
