WASHINGTON, Dec, 23, 1875. The great army of Democratic patriots that gathered at the Capital, anxious to serve their country in any capacity what-ever, has, during the past few days, been materially lessened. The smile of triumph which on their arrival lighted up their ru-bicund features with so much brilliancy, has gradually turned into the gloomiest and darkest of frowns. In the Democratic caucus held on the Saturday evening previous to the meeting of Congress, all that portion of the party that hailed from the North, the East and the West beheld their hopes and ambitious longings ade away in the land of dreams. In the GRAND DISTRIBUTION OF THE SPOILS,

Prompted by no selfish motives, but with a full, as well as honorable, de-termination to devote themselves to the interests and the future welfare of the country, they had hastily left their homes and daily avocations, as did Cincinnatus when called to take a part in the Councils of the Roman Senate. But alas! the morning of their hopes, which dawned with such refulgent splendor and promise, soon faded away into darkness, and "a change came o'er the spirit of their dreams." IN SEARCH OF A POLICY.

What may be the precise line of action that will be pursued by the Democracy in general legislation does not yet appear to be fully determined upon. On Saturday of last week, another Caucus was held for the purpose of arriving at some definite conclusion, but, so far they have been un-able to fix upon any line of policy or action. They are evidently at sea, without chart, rudder or compass. Hon. Sam-nel Sunset Cox, whose aspirations for the peakership were so effecutually squelchl, would doubtless like to be as leader upon the floor of the House, as he continues, on every opportunity pre-sented, to display in grandiloquent style, his eloquence and wit: On Wednesday last, a resolution was offered by Mr. Fort of Illinois which provided, in the matter of subordinate appointments about the House, that preference be given to the EX-SOLDIER who had become maimed and crippled in the Union Cause. By a vote of 162 to a 02, the resolution was voted down. Mr. Cox, with his usual celerity, was on hand and took upon himself the task of defeud-ing the vote; but, with all the learning and ability which the gentleman is known his elegant sophistry for once failed him. There was no concealing the fact that the ad thus virtually repudiated their past Dedges; and at the bidding of Southern Confederates, not only attempted to wipe out the proud record won by the loyal ness in the breasts of those to whom they soldier but made for themselves a record which every loyal man will blush to read. There was a time when the vote of the Union Soldiers was considered of some importance; but now, the Southern Con federates have returned to partial power, we suppose that, with the aid of northern dough faces, and northern Copper heads, they feel themselves possessed of suffic-ient strength to get along without them and, consequently, they have displayed their true colors. Retrenchment. Reform and conomy, is the battle cry that is to be borne upon every breeze. The army is to be reduced to a handful of men. Approriations are to be cut down to nothing. Government legal-tender notes, or greenbacks, are the notes or due-bills of the United States, not on interest, and without a fixed time for their payment. Their issue in 1862 was not a matter of choice, but of necessity. When the Republican party assumed the reins of government in 1861, it found a vast conspiracy organized, which soon broke out into a terrible rebellion, and convulsed the continent like the shocks of an earthquake. The treasury was empty, and the credit of the government had been nearly destroyed by a Democratic Administration. Foreign capitalists did not take our loans to any great extent, not because they sympathized with the rebels, as most of them did, but because our nation seemed to be on the verge of destruction, and the prospect of payment was poor. Our own people at the commencement of the war lent their money to the government with great willingness, just as they en-listed in the army, but after awhile their enthusiasm wore off, their lending ability lessened, money did not flow into the treasury as fast as it was needed, and our nation was obliged to resort to the expedient to which every nation has resorted in great extremities—issue large quantities of treasury notes. These notes have circulated, and still circulate as money, in every State and Territory of the Union except California, the land of gold. Everywhere else they are regarded as money, and perform all the services of money line effecting the avolunces of proventy and effecting the exchanges of property, and are by law a legal-tender at their face value for the payment of all debts, public or private, except duties on imports and interest on public debt. Money is a representative of property. These notes represent a property debt against the United States, duly certified by the proper United States, duly certified by the proper officers, and are money just as truly as gold and silver, and would be equally valuable as coin if they were receivable for duties on imports, and could pass current as money outside the boundaries of our own country. of our own country.

When these notes were issued to the nount of four hundred millions of dollars, the necessities of the treasury still being great the government, in order not to inflate the currency any farther, issued a large amount of compound interest notes, shrewdly calculating that they would not circulate long as money, but soon find their way into the bank vaults soon as the treasury was in a situation to financial writers, there can be no doubt in the minds of most intelligent men that the legal-tender projecty adds value to the notes, prevents misunderstandings in trade and trouble in the payment of debts, and it is to be regretted that the Presiopinion, Congress has no more right to repeal the legal-tender clause, and thereby

The only honest way to get ri of these notes and their legal-tender char acter (if it were desirable to do so), is to redeem them by offering a bond bearing a rate of interest which the holders would eagerly accept in exchange for them; but questionable whether good policy would permit, or the people approve, the substitution of an interest-bearing deb for one which bears no interest, and which the creditors are willing to continue in the present form. To accumulate gold in he treasury by increased taxation, interest for the purpose of redeeming these notes, would send up the price of gold to a point that would unsettle values o the benefit of some persons and the injury of others, producing more evil consequences than the present state of sus-

The value of government notes de-pends on the credit of the government, and the credit of the government will always depend more or less on the main tenance of peace with foreign nations and among ourselves. A foreign war or another rebellion would depreciate our paper money; or raise the price of gold, which amounts to the same thing. Our national to possess, he proved himself altogether bank notes, being secured by the credit unequal to the emergency. His wit and of the government, would depreciate just tlie same as greenbacks in time of war. Should the government have the misfortune to pass into the hands of a party that has shown the least inclina repudiate the debt obligations of State or Nation, or that has denied that these notes were debt obligations, to be paid as soon as the government was able, then their value will be lessened—if not de-Neither the Congress that authorized their issue, nor any Congress since, intended that they should always remain in existence and constitute a part of the permanent circulating medium but it was expected that they were to be redeemed as soon as the interests of the country and the state of the treasury would admit. It is not advisable for the overnment to become a great national lank any more than a great manufactur ing establishment; these can be better managed by associations of individuals or by private enterprise. The good policy which brought these notes into existence We suppose, from all that we can learn, in time of war demands their removal in time of peace, in order that their advantages may be again secured when calamity comes upon our nation, as it may. Had there been four hundred millions o legal-tenders in the hands of the people in 1862, the issue of four hundred millions more, instead of being a blessing, would have been a curse, by nearly destroying the value of the whole amount in circula-

A commercial nation like ours needs a currency that is easily convertible into coin at the will of the holder, without expense; but a nation staggering under a mountain load of debt cannot always have what it needs. It is hedged in by barriers which can only be removed by time, pa-tience and labor, and will generally suffer while evils are sufferable, rather than resort to untried experiments and measures of doubtful expediency. The Congress 1862 intended they should be redeemed but no time was set, for it was not known when it could be done. There can be no doubt that a large majority of the people intend they shall be redeemed at some future time, when the state of the treasury and the interests of the country will per

Dy offering a bond bearing 3.65 per cent.; but it is useless to talk of that rate; those who have greenbacks will not lend them for less than six per cent., and it is extremely doubtful whether the people, much as they desire resumption, would sanction their redemption in interest-barring bonds. They have heard of the bearing bonds. They have heard of the boy who paid too dear for the whistle. There is one other way to prepare for resumption that is very little talked about, but it is the royal road, nevertheless, which leads there without having to cross the deep chasm which now separates gold from paper money. That other way is simply to pay off the gold interest debt of the government, which is chiefly held in Europe and causes a constant drain of gold from this country to pay the interest. Our gold revenues amount to about one hundred and sixty millions of dollars per annum, and it nearly all goes out of the country to pay the interest on our bonds. This is the huge vampire that is sucking the life-blood out of the nation, and it new veins to fatten the insatiable mor ster. The first great work to prepare for resumption is to pay of the gold interest deht of the United States, and then the gold revenues which are now pledged to pay that interest will be set free to redeem all the greenbacks that may be presented, and the great problem of how to resume
