Buckwheat is a good grain for sheep as a change from other feed. When given for a long period it causes irritation of the skin, and the sheep are apt then to nibble their wool, and pull it out. A pint a day is a fair allowance for each sheep No grain needs to be ground for sheep, as they masticate and digest their food very thoroughly.

Brittle hoofs are sometimes caused by the continual rasping by farriers or blacksmiths; sometimes by the use of tar upon the hoofs, and often they are a constitutional defect of the horse. To Make a Manure Spreader. Procure a strong pole, about ten feet long-and-six inches in diameter, and secure a tongue in the middle so as to form a large T. The tongue may be bolted or secured by mortise or tenon. After the tongue is made fast, set it up in a perpendicular through the head piece, one foot brush, letting the brush extend bethe brush behind the cross-head, and out of words, it seems as if there were no let the driver stand on the board as law out of which some acute lawyer canthe spreader is driven across the not find a loop-hole of escape. A man with a team can spread an acre' per hour of any kind of manure. Such a spreader will be found useful in preparing land for seeding after it has been furrowed, as it will crush the lumps, fill up dead furrows and leave the field like a garden bed. In lieu of a large , pole, a heavy slab or narrow plank may be employed for the head of the spreader. The spreadspread evenly.

Calves .- A calf should never be avoid it. As soon as its coat is dry it should be taken from the cow and put into a stall next to her, where she can see it. This is better than separating them altogether, unless where the cow cannot hear it. A calf may be taught to drink in one lesson, if patience is used, and it has not sucked the cow. It should have the fresh warm milk for a week, then warmed half-skimmed milk for a time, and finally warmed skimmedmilk. While the weather is cool the milk should be warmed and given a little sweet. Well boiled linseed meal gruel, is an excellent addition to the milk.

To Pickle Onions.—Choose small, as possible. Top and tail them, but do not pare the tops close, as the air will soften and spoil the onions. Scald them with brine. Repeat this on the second day, and, when cold, peel the onions as quickly as possible, throwing them into vinegar as they are done, to prevent their blackening. Boil vinegar enough to cover them, with sliced ginger, black and white pepper, and mace; when cooled, Pour it over the onions. Cork them well, and dip the corks in bottled
