HERRICK.—The fortieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. DAVID ARM-STRONG, was celebrated on the 16th of June last. It was a lovely day. All na-ture was full of melody, fragrance and beauty, and seemed in sympathy with the occasion. Brothers, sisters, children, grandchildren and friends, came from the hills and valleys of Pennsylvania and New York, to renew their love and respect for each other and to talk over the joys and ATTEMPT AT HIGHWAY RODDERY.-Last Saturday evening S. M. FASSETT and daughter were riding in a covered carriage near Pennyville, in Bradford county, and about nine o'clock were in a piece of woods just beyond the residence of a man by the name of SCOTT. It was quite dark, Some person approached the head of the horse as if to stop her, but she was a mare

These home gatherings are delightful, and seem to be a kind of prophecy of the great home gathering beyond this life. The flying moments were filled with conhorse as if to stop her, but she was a mare of some spirit and sprang away briskly. Mr. FASSETT saw the attempt and touch-ed her with his whip. She sprang for-ward, the hind wheel just grazing the man's body. He cried out halt, but there was no halt, and then he flung a stone, which entered the back part of the car-tisize without doing any damage. Mr.

versation until about two o'clock, when dinner was announced, and our party re-paired to a table spread under an awning riage without doing any damage. Mr. FASSETT stopped at the next house, but in the open air, and loaded with delicious food of kinds to numerous to mention. It soon became quite evident that they all there was no one there except a crippled man who could render no assistance in meant business, and the long table was wonderfully relieved of its burden. In due time an air of satisfaction seemed to going back after the culprit. Further on at Smithfield, a constable was interviewed with regard to the matter, but the night rest upon each countenance, and all were was so dark that Mr. FASSETT of course could not identify him or give any clue to soon ready for the next section of the pro his identification by any one else.
