To illustrate how carefully the political campaign was considered and the plan mentioned contrived by the Democrats, it is instructive to refer to a circular issued om the rooms of the Democratic Con servative State Central Committee at New Orleans, marked "confidential," and signed by J. W. Patton, President, and P. J. Sullivan, Secretary, intended for cir-culation in each parish, and recommendng the formation of ward clubs therein. These circulars urged that "In conversation no gloomy 'orebodings should be in-dulged in, and that the result of the election should be spoken of as a foregone conclusion, as we have the means of carying the election, and intend to do so. But be careful to say and do nothing that can be construed into a threat or intimidation of any character." The circular also recommended that there should be frequent meetings of all the c ubs to be at their several places of meeting and proceed thence on horseback to the central with a sense of your united strength. And it further recommended that on the day of election, at each polling place, there should be affidavits prepared to the effect that there had been no intimidation forts by the Democratic Conservative party to prevent any one from voting on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. Mr. Merrimon took an appeal from the President pro tem., and this morning at the opening of the session he took the floor and made an extended argument in favor of it. He took Mr. Kandall's view of the question, and assumed the untenable ground that they were always in force unless repealed by both houses. His colleagues on the Democratic side stook very little interest in the discussion, and were in fact much question at all. They therefore took no part in the debate, and allowed Mr. Merrimon to get badly defeated by Senators Morton and Edmunds, who took opposite ground from him. and supported the decision of the President pro tem. Mr. Bayard was the only Democrat who spoke, and he said but little more than to reiterate his known views, that there were not now and could not be any joint rules of the two bodies. Senators Edmunds and Morton conducted the debate upon the Republican side, and their arguments were clear and conclusive in support of Mr. Ferry's

GRANT ABOUT BEWITT.

The Story of the Interview as told by the Presiden Himself—How Mr. Howitt Abused his Condidence and Misconstrued his Words—The President's Opinion of the Political Situation.

WASHINGTON, December 10.—The President states that during his conversation with Mr. Hewitt. about which so much has been written in were necessary for a quorum in the South Carolina Legislature. A telegrain came from Gov. Chamberlain next day stating that in Columbia it was reported that Gen. Hampton had received a telegram from Mr. Hewitt alleging that the President said whichever Legislature had sixtythree members would be recognized. The President states what he did say was that as he understood it, sixtythree members were necessary in order to legally organize the Legislature, but that it was simply an exdisgusted that he had raised the pression of his private opinion. He added to-day by way of comment, that the Republican House consisted of 59 members and the Democratic of 56, excluding those from Laurens and Edgeficid, who hold no certifica-

On Wednesday last the President received the following dispatch from Mr. Hewitt: HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, WASHINGTON, )

The President, Executive Mansion: The President, Executive Manton:

I have received a rollable telegram from Columbia starting that the sixty-third members holding a certificate from the Secretary of State has been sworn into the House presided over by Speaker Wallare, which is therefore organized in accordance with the requirements of law as stated by you. (Signed)

ABRAYS. HEWITT.

A second dispatch from Mr. Hewitt stated that the Supreme Court had just decided that the House presided over by W. H. Wallace was the legally constituted one. From these the President infers that Mr. Hewitt misinterpreted him in his communication to Wade Hampton. He states that the conversation was free and confidential, and he had no idea it would be used in that

On the same day Mr. Hewitt and Mr. Randolph called, and the President showed the former the telegram from Gov. Chamberlain and his reply stating in plain terms that his confidence had been abused. Mr. Hewitt then said that he only gave sixty-three as, in the opinion of the President, the necessary number to transact business. Just then Senator Randolph presented a dispatch from Wade Hampton stating in effect that if the President recognized the Wallace House and withdrew the troops all would be peace and quite.

The President promptly and warmly replied that it was a piece of impertinence on the part of Wade Hampton to instruct him as to his luty; that the troops were in South Carolina in obedience to the constitutional demand of the Governor, to prevent domestic violence.

The President in his conversation to-day further stated that he had been grossly misrepresented. In speaking of political matters he said that Mr. Hayes got the votes of all ing the late rebellion, except four. States which furthered the rebellion. in wards where crime and illiteracy predominated; that the thirty-five electoral votes of the State were secured through the instrumentality of men who had no stake in the State. The same class of men carried Connecticut and New Jersey. The only Northern State carried by respectable votes for Tilden was Indiana. As'the illiterate classes referred to have the elective franchise, no one claims that Mr. Tilden did not lecolored people in the South were allowed to vote with the same freelom, there would be no contest over the States of Florida, Louisiana and South Carolina. But suppose the colored people were not allowed to vote, the representation from the outhern States would be greatly reluced, and Mr. Tilden would be hirty-five votes short from that secion, which would have elected Mr. Hayes beyond doubt. The Presilent defended General Ruger's action under the circumstances. He has two resolutions of inquiry from Congress in regard to the use of the troops, and in replying he will express his views more fully. With regard to "Washington, there would be troops concentrated there if occasion demands it. He had no objection to impeachment, as he could defend his conduct to the satisfiction of all fair-minded persons. He has received five or six threatening letters per day, but pays no attention
