A better plan is to retain a good man, even though he have a few oddities. Such a man will soon adapt himself to the "environment." But the best plan is to bear constantly in mind that managers of schools should avoid ex- tremes, and that too many pedagogical cooks may spoil the éducational broth. It is asserted by the Chicago Post that the fault with our collegiate system is, that it does not teach young men the things they are obliged to know to make	body and clear of the desk at one; rais- ing them over the desk at two; and de- positing them noiselessly at three. But in Fourth and Fith Reader rooms such wire-pulling seems out of place, except as a form of normal or model school drill. Out upon the beggarly, apologetic method of advocating popular education! One says: "We should have public schools because school-houses are better than jails." Another says: "We ought to support common schools because educa- tion pays." Another says: "We must have schools in order that our people may be moral." Such arguments may have been necessary in the past, but it is high time that our educational tub should stand on its own bottom. Is it such arguments that the advocates of religion use in their exhortations—that religion is economical and profitable and necessary to morality? Or do they not advocate it for itself—pre-eminent and alone? So should the educational evan- gelists preach their cause—the cause of education for itself. Should a man desir- ing to marry apologize for his intentions? As well might an enthusiast, for popular education apologize or present secondary results or sordid motives as arguments in his cause. A man marries because he wants to marry and has a right to marry, and he has no occasion to justify his act with arguments deduced from warm dim- ners or the replacement of shirt-buttons, So, since the people desire it, we must and will have popular education, primari- ly and chiefly, though not solely, because education, like marriage and religion, is	Sold at all Drug Stores Here. aug 18. Cows to give much milk must have feed out of which to proluce it. The saying that it costs no more to keep a good cow than a poor one, is false. The cow which can manufacture the most food into milk is the best one. The true cests of the quality of milk is in the pound of butter' and cheese which it yields. Little dependence can be placed in the cream gauge and lactometer. Some milk will throw up cream which is extremely porous. Sometimes '20 per cent. of cream rises, not 6 per cent. of which is but- ter. The only satisfactory way to determine a cow's value as a butter producer is to set her milk separate- ly and churn it by itself. The lac- tometer is scarcely more reliable than-the cream gauge. The richer the milk is in cream the poorer it will be shown to be according to the lactometer test. An excess of cream effects this instrument the same as an excess of water, as both cream and water are lighter than milk. By removing all the cream and having all samples of milk at a given tem- perature, a very exact comparative test of the caseine properties can be made. If milk is reduced to a low temperature before the cream rises, the cream will rise more rapidly and be more frothy than when it rises at a Ligher-temperature. Col. A man marries because he wants to marry and has a right to marry, and he has no occasion to justify his act with arguments deduced from warm din- ners or the replacement of shirt-buttons. So, since the people desire it, we must and will have popular cducation, primari- ly and chiefly, though not solely, because education, like marriage and religion, is a good thing in itself./	Sold at all Drug Stores Here. aug 18. 	breeders feed, their cows ought to give milk or die. If 'Holsteins will endure such lavish feeding, a strong point is established in 'their' favor. Cows to give much milk must have feed out of which to proluce it. The saying that it costs no more to keep a good cow than a poor one, is false. The cow which can manufacture the most food into milk is the best one. The true cests of the quality of milk is in the pound of butter' and cheese which it yields. Little dependence can be placed in the cream gauge and lactometer. Some milk will throw up cream which is extremely porous. Sometimes '20 per cent. of cream rises, not 6 per cent. of which is but- ter. The only satisfactory way to determine a cow's value as a butter producer is to set her milk separate- ly and churn it by itself. The lac- tometer is scarcely more reliable than-the cream gauge. The richer the milk is in cream the poorer it will be shown to be according to the lactometer test. An excess of cream effects this instrument the same as an excess of water, as both cream and water are lighter than milk. By removing all the cream and having all samples of milk at a given tem- perature, a very exact comparative test of the caseine properties can be made. If milk is reduced to a low temperature before the cream rises, the cream will rise more rapidly and be more frothy than when it rises at a Ligher-temperature. Col. Holfman—My experience in testing milk at different temperatures leads me to doubt the conclusions of most scientific won. They cleim	prose into poetry; and he succeeds, by means of so-called language-lessons, in muddling with twaddle his unfortunate subjects. Another will not tolerate the use of text-books. His hobby is object-lessons, and he is indifferent as to the quantity of book-learning imparted, as long as his subordinates enable their pupils to tell "What part of the face is that in the middle, below the forehead and above the mouth?" and to distinguish between a thimble and a gun-boat. Another rides the hobby of discipline. He does not care a continental whether children learn anything or not, as long as they are correct in the maneuvers of phys- ical exercises. He sits in his office and pulls wires, and glories in the manner in which his little Punches and Judys hop around in obedience to his solemn peda- gogical jerks. Where changes are frequently made all these characters are liable to be inflicted on a suffering school population in a suc- cession of such rapidity as to make ever their specialties neutralize each other's excellencies. A better plan is to retain a good man, even though he have a few oddities. Such a man will soon adapt himself to the "environment." But the best plan is to bear- constantly in mind that managers of schools should avoid ex- tremes, and that too many pedagogical cooks may spoil the éducational broth. It is asserted by the Chicago (Post that the fault with our collegiate system is, that it does not teach young men the things they are obliged to know to make their way in the world they must live and strucede in.	body and clear of the desk at one ; raising them over the desk at two ; and depositing them noiselessly at three . But in Fourth and Fifth Reader rooms such wire-pulling seems out of place, except as a form of normal or model school drill. OUT upon the beggarly, apologetic method of advocating popular education! One says: "We should have public schools because school-houses are better than jails." Another says: "We ought to support common schools because educa- tion pays." Another says: "We must have schools in order that our people may be moral." Such arguments may have been necessary in the past, but it is high time that our educational tub should stand on its own bottom. Is it such arguments that the advocates of religion use in their exhortations—that religion is economical and profitable and necessary to morality? Or do they not advocate it for itself—pre-eminent and alone? So should the educational evan- gelists preach their cause—the cause of education for itself. Should a man desir- ing to marry apologize for his intentions? As well might an extinsiast, for popular education apologize or present secondary results or sordid motives as arguments in his cause. A man marries because he wants to marry and has a right to marry, and he has no occasion to justify his act with arguments deduced from warm din- ners or the replacement of shirt-buttons, So, since the people desire it, we must and will have popular education, primari- ly and chiefly, though not solely, because education, like marriage and religion, is a good thing in itself./	Sold at all Drug Stores Here. aug 18.
