She had gone to Indiana, got a divorce there and then joined Mills in Central City, Colorado, where they were married. All went well until Mills began to gamble. Then he began to abuse her, and finally forced her to accompany him to Utah. There he started faro bank and house of ill-fame, and compelled her to work in the toes, and other provisions, ostensibly for kitchen for a year and a half until the house was broken up. In 1871 Mills joined the Mormons and took two more wives, whereat she left home in disguise. She worked in the City Hotel at Denveras dining-room girl for a year and a half, during the two houses or separately, and withdra them to decide by their own votes to white persons voted for by any of the electors state for to what person, the invalid vote ahalf be given; for which purposs they allowed the termio (one hour), and no long which no other certificate shall be of the control girl for a year and a half, during which time Mills was killed by his partner in a quarrel about the divi-
