DR. SAMUEL ELIOT, of Boston, says The greatest error into which teachers are liable to fall is a mechanical method NE HUNDRED of teaching. Education is a work of freedom. One of the causes of this mechanical process of teaching is the forming of pupils into one class and treating them as whole. This is not right. Each pupil has a peculiar organization, and must not be treated as a machine that is obliged to perform a given amount of work in a giv en time. Another cause is the assignment of inexperienced teachers to classes composed of small children. This is very wrong, both as reg ards the papil and as THE NEXT NINETY DAYS regards the teacher. The teacher very soon gets in the habit of producing the result sought by the quickest possible method, and the result is a mechanical process of education. If, in stead of being ssigned to a class of young pupils, the for instance, a Jersey cow (the Jer happy home, and brought sadness and inexperienced teacher was placed in sey is acknowledged by the majority mourning.
