Medical.
"VEGETINE," Says a Boston physician, "has no equal as a blood purifier. Hearing of its many wonderful cures, after all other remedies have failed, I visited the laboratory and examined myself of its genuine merit. It is prepared from the best and freshest of herbs, and is highly effective, and they are computed in such a manner as to produce lasting results."
 Ab, tender nose that sends a drift Of children's kisses through the nose,
 And eke-out of sweet "good night"
 That thoughts of heaven and home arouse;
 And a soft sigh-ripe and heavy,
 As when the feet and blossoms part,
 And little feet that patter shower,
 Like the soft droppings of the shower.
 And in the children's rooms aloft
 What blossom-shapes do gently slip
 Their dusky dainties and their ruy,
 From clapping hand and kissing lip,
 A naked sweetness to the eye—
 Blossom and baby work alike,
 In winking eye, so clear a sight!
 Ah, e'er you see the light!
 And, ah, what lovely wintery ecstasies
 Bestrew the floor in an empty sock,
 By unnumbered "good night" angels,
 As e'er the weary "good night"
 As dead birds' throats, a tiny flock,
 That, sure upon some meadow green,
 And drink the heaven-sweet nectar,
 scarce larger than an even eye,
 Frocks that seem flowery rads cut out.
 They fly direct in angelic-wise,
 To mother's knee that trooping crowd,
 The soft little hands like kissing shells,
 And their tiny feet like blossoms,
 Their bright heads bowed and worshipping,
 Some dozing, some that suck the daisies,
 Some that nod their heads and sway,
 The gates of Paradise swing wide,
 A moment's space in soft array,
 A moment's rest the flaming sword,
 As e'er the weary "good night"
 From Eden's secret heart is torn,
 That breath of Paradise most pure,
 That melody cast "the children's prayer,"
 Ah, how patently mystery!
 The world's great unconscious king,
 A rain drop on a blossom's lip!
 Will innocence that wags its tongue,
 And low-lying that tremble with awe,
 Unconscious of the cross and pain,
 From sweet children, and in that child
 And sweet heaven recomputed!
 From blood, and in the soft down,
 As fragrant words as a shadow,
 And all the upper store, how hushed
 With children's sleep, and roses of dawn,
 And e'er the weary "good night"
 The stars of twilight opening wide,
 Take up the heavenly call at even,
 And that on to light and heaven.
Miscellaneous.
Anastasia's Ghost.
 How well I remember that dismal November night, some vague premonition of evil weighed on my mind, as I sat alone in the twilight. And yet there was nothing, apparently, to make me gloomy. On the contrary, I ought to have been more than usually cheerful; had I not received a delicious promise from Kate Watson, the school teacher, that she would marry the widower like myself to marry this girl of eighteen. Her mother had been a housekeeper in our family, but died soon after Kate's birth. So it happened that she was adopted by us, and had no children of our own. My wife treated her kindly, but without much warmth of feeling. Anastasia was of such a peculiar disposition that I actually believed she was jealous of this infant. Poor Anastasia! she wanted me solemnly or her death, but she died, and I was something that completely won my heart.
 Kate died in her tenth year when my wife died. I sent her away to a boarding school, and she had been called me abroad, did not see her again until my return eight years afterwards. I was somewhat bewildered to find a lovely woman, instead of the little girl I had left in short dresses. Of course, you can imagine the sequel. I fell in love with this charming adopted daughter. There was something in the frank tenderness of her manner that completely won my heart.
 "William Raymond," came in a horse voice from the street, and he adopted by us, and he had no children of our own. My wife treated her kindly, but without much warmth of feeling. Anastasia was of such a peculiar disposition that I actually believed she was jealous of this infant. Poor Anastasia! she wanted me solemnly or her death, but she died, and I was something that completely won my heart.
