This we are unwilling to con-cede; and although there is a close re-cede; and although there is a close reemblance in appearance, this is a case at a period of time when everything was in where appearances are wonderfully de- a far different state than now, there is a ceptive; and how any one having any ap-preciation of the delicacy of really fine I find on a careful consideration of the butter can substitute such an article, is vote cust when this bill was on third readhesitation and bloting on the part of some. vote cast when this bill was on third. readmore than I can conceive. I once tasted ing, that a large proportion of the votes it entirely unprejudiced—in fact, supposed it to be a very fine article of burter—ar.d such a taste I never experienced before and never hope to again. I agree entirely with your correspond cast against it came from my side of the chamber, and a large proportion of them came from Senators not affected by the bill. If I have counted correctly, out of the ten votes cast against it, eight are Re publicans and six of them are not affected ent's views in regard to adulterations of food, The coloring of butter and cheese iv this bill. I ask Senators on my side of he chamber, in this year when we are is a useless and expensive practice-not for the purpose of deceiving any one genbout to enter into a political struggle that erally, but to produce an article of a par-ticular style to suit the fancy of custommay decide for years the political complexon of the State, when we are charged unustly, as I have always claimed, and as I believe, but nevertheless charged with deers. Cheese uncolored is about the shade of milk, and never yellow like butter. The amount paid annually by the cheese parting from the will and wishes of the nanufacturers of this country for coloring nasses at times, can we at this day, when we are approaching the important material amounts to thousands of dollars. and the question has often been discusse in the Algerican Dairyman's Association risis, when here is a bill directly affecting he masses of the people-and when, as ldim. a large proportion of them feel that how the public taste and demand in this respect could be corrected and this useless expense avoided, but the problem is still he law, as it now stands, is oppressive and oppressive to an extreme degree, when many a man has been sold out, and his lit unsolved, and so long as the demand is the home gone, and he finds, instead of paying his debts, it has gone to swell the emoluments of an officer, who makes himor colored cheese so long producers will have to conform to the practice.

The article used is universally Annato, or its extracts in some form, and when usedulterated is entirely harmless, neiself rich in a few years, and this bill comes before this Senate, 8 Republican Senate asking for relief, and asking us to reduc ther injuring or improving the quality of butter or cheese. I think the practice of and cut down these fees by which officers become rich suddenly, lopping off its oppressive features, but still leaving it a coloring butter is not very general, tho' it exists to some extent in our county, else Wells & Richardson would not have air bill. They do not become rich in m an agency at Towanda for selling their county and in my district from taking ille coloring material. It is undoubtedly the gal fees; they become rich from taking gal fees ; they become rich from taking poorer class of butter-makers that use it., that which the haw gives them, and nobody I will close this article by giving the will blame the officer for that; the remedy I will close this article by giving the best recipe I know of for good colored butter at all seasons of the year: Good grade or thoroughbred Alderney cows (sometimes called Jerseys): good pasture and pure water for sommer; nice, sweet, early-cut hay, with grain and roots for een suggested in the vital portions of this
