THE SWALLOW.

Of all the birds that swim the air 1'd rather be the swallow: And, summer days, when days were fair. The harrying clouds across the sky. And with the singing winds I'd fly.

My eager wings would need no rest If I were but a swallow; I'd scale the highest mountain crest And sound the deepest hollow. No forest could my pathway hide; No ocean plain should be too wide, I'd find the sources of the Nile, I'd see the Sandwich Islands And Chimborazo's granite pile. And Scotland's rugged Highland's; Tu skim the sands of Timbuctoo:

Constantinopie's mosques I'd view. I'd fly among the isles of Greece. The pride of great Apollo.

And circle round the bay of Nice, If I were but a swallow. And view the sunny fields of France. The vineyards merry with the dance. Dart swiftly like an arrow, And catch the breath of eglantine Along the banks of Yarrow; Tel roam the world and never tire

The first one contained all the badges of the different corps engaged in that memorable battle; the second contained the word "Welcome", in large gilt letters, while the third had crossed sabres and underneath the motto (that must have thrilled the heart of every soldier present who had participated in the fight) "Welcome to the field you won." At the point where the Taneytown and Emmettsburg roads unite with the Baltimore road, stands what is now known as the "Battle-field Hotel," This house was used as the out-post for our sharp-shooters, and as we near it we find that it is almost entirely enveloped with flags of every size and lescription. We drove on and soon entered the beautiful cemetery which was consecrated on the 19th day of November, 1863, to our soldier dead. who fell in that terrib'e three day's fight. Just inside the entrance the eye meets the bronze statue of Major General John F. Reynolds, who was killed almost at the opening of the battle. The base is of lark Quincy granite, about ten feet east from condemned cannon, donated by the State of Pennsylvania; it represents the General standing with his face turned toward that part of right hand holding a field glass and hanging by his side; the left grasps the top of the hilt of his sword.
