WITNESSED BY HON. F. C. BURNELL.

We are pleased to announce that Hon. F. C. BURNELL has withdrawn from the congressional contest. We have not yet received a copy of his letter, but will print it next week. This patriotic action on the part of Mr. BURNELL, and the assurance that Col. OVERTON will receive the full Republican vote of Wyoming county, reflects credit upon his patriotism, as well as fidelity to principle on the part of the Republicans of Wyoming, beyond a doubt.

Did the Argus make pretensions to any degree of fairness, we should feel surprised at its effort to misrepresent Col. OVERTON's position on the silver bill. We published the record at the time the vote was cast, and it was satisfactory to every candid honest man. The bill, as originally presented, proposed to make the oblong of the silver dollar free. That is, it permitted any individual to take bullion to the mints of the United States, and have 412 grains coined and stamped one dollar. The 412 grains of silver was at that time worth about 92 cents, and has since depreciated to about 88 cents. Col. OVERTON declared himself as unqualifiedly opposed to the bill, but at the time it was up for action in the House, he was necessarily absent, and was paired with a friend of the bill. The Senate struck the free coinage clause out of the bill, and when it was returned to the House for concurrence, Col. OVERTON voted against postponing action, arguing that if the opponents of the objectionable features of the bill were strong enough to postpone, they could just as well amend, making it of sufficient weight to be worth a dollar. Another good reason for voting against delay was the fact that the prolonged agitation was proving detrimental to the business interests of the country. The bill having passed the House without increasing its weight, the President vetoed it, and Col. OVERTON voted to sustain the veto.

There may be those who honestly believe the debased coin should pass for a dollar, but no fair man, we care not what his political proclivities are, will charge Col. OVERTON with inconsistency in his votes upon the question. The limited experience the country has had with the ninety-cent dollar, has proven the wisdom of his position, and many who differed with him at the time, now acknowledge their error. We have said this much not by way of apology or explanation, but simply to call attention to the dishonest course of the Argus, and the desperate straits of the opposition in their efforts to find fault. It is our opinion that the Argus will have all it can do to attend from this time to the day of election, in its endeavors to convince its readers that the editor is not "wasting crowd" in supporting DIMMICK, whose "record" has given its very young man of the Argus so much trouble of late.

Among the relics secured by Mr. MINAY, on his late visit to the battlefield of Gettysburg, is an ambulet, of a group consisting doubtless of a mother and two little daughters, one perhaps nine or ten years old, and the other possibly six. The picture was carried the person of a Confederate soldier killed in the battle, and slightly buried his person, it escaped the search of his garments to which they were invariably subjected. Mr. MINAY has taken steps to have the picture reproduced in some of the illustrated papers, and this relic may to that become known to the family of the deceased soldier and be returned to them. He was probably a man in the prime of a vigorous life, and belonged to the 31st Georgia Regiment, which formed the right of Gordon's Brigade on the morning of the first day of the Gettysburg battle.

When asked a few days since why he did not put up DIMMICK's name, the editor of the Argus replied, "he don't come down enough." Mr. D. was in town again last week and now we believe his name is to appear at the head of the democratic county ticket in the Argus this week. Plenty of dressing we presume, can make "crow" palatable.

It is currently reported that C. E. ANDRUS, who, three years ago, thought it very ungrateful in O. J. CHUBBUCK to run as an independent candidate against him, now contemplates doing the same thing, hoping thereby to draw votes enough from Mr. FRISBIE to elect the Democratic candidate. We have no fears that the plot will succeed, and when the canvass is over, Mr. ANDRUS will find that he has only burned his own claws in hisilly attempt to haul democratic chestnuts out of the fire.

CLINT. DEWITT boldly proclaims that for the past twelve years, ever since he "returned from his retreat from the draft," he has been in regard to his political belief. Can the man who unblushingly says he has for years been teaching falsehood be trusted?

The democracy, or the leaders, have finally been bulldozed into supporting the notorious DIMMICK, with his "famous record," unexplained. Can they compel the rank and file to follow suit?

While Col. OVERTON was preparing death on the battle-field, for the preservation of the Union, where was CLINT. DEWITT?

Several of the Democratic candidates base their feeble hopes of success on the efforts of treacherous Republicans, who are to be employed to work in their interest on the day of election. Look out for such men.

REMINISCENCE OF THE WAR.

A little incident occurred yesterday morning, says the Harrisburg Daily Telegraph of September 27th, 1878, that will be of more than ordinary interest to the veteran Union soldiers in Harrisburg, especially to those who were confined in the prison pens of the south during the war. Among the guests at the Lochiel for the past week has been General DAN VICKERS, of New Jersey, a tall, fine-looking gentleman, who served with credit and gallantry in a New Jersey regiment, as General Hoyt did in one from the Keystone State. During the war VICKERS and Hoyt were captured by the rebels, and confined in one of the southern prison pens, Macon, Georgia, for a long time. In order to prevent the threatened bombardment of Charleston, South Carolina, by our troops on Morris Island, a large body of prisoners, about six hundred in number, including all the field officers, were sent on cars to that city. During the journey Generals Hoyt and VICKERS, accompanied by two or three others, sprang from the cars in the darkness, when they were in full motion, and escaped. They wandered through the swamps all night, and knowing they were hunted like wild beasts, and fearing capture, waded into a dense thicket of brush and water, and remained there all day, hungry unto starvation, and almost literally consumed by mosquitoes. When the night came on they got back into the road, and when within a few miles of our lines were freed by bloodhounds, and taken on to Charleston, where they remained all through the bombardment. During their stay there they became separated, and from that day until yesterday they had never met, and hence it was with more than ordinary fervor that the two veterans grasped hands and congratulated each other at the Lochiel Hotel yesterday.

The two officers sat and related their experience to each other since their separation, and it was evident that their parting for fifteen years had not obliterated that love for each other that is felt in common by all the veterans of the war.

It has been ascertained that the Democratic State Committee, headed by Mr. SPEER, is calling upon its county organizations for the name and address of every minister in the counties, together with the name and address of five active, representative Christian men in each election district, with the denomination to which each belongs. The Democratic State Committee are urgent that these lists should be promptly furnished. It is supposed Chairman MAXWELL will at once proceed to collect the names and address of all ministers—if he has not already done so—and send them to Mr. SPEER, the illustrious salary grabber, whose conduct at one time so offended the Democracy that they unceremoniously hurled him out of their State Convention at Wilkesbarre. If the clergymen of this county receive a batch of lying political circulars will know how their names and address have been obtained at Democratic headquarters, in Philadelphia. If Mr. MAXWELL has not time to attend to this matter, he can undoubtedly procure the services of CLINT. DEWITT. He has a great deal of reverence for ministers of the Gospel.

Every workingman, who knows anything of the operation of Government on labor, is apprised of the fact that whenever it deals in bills of credit the wages of workmen never afford them as much profit as when the Government deals in coin. All the natural laws of trade demonstrate this fact. Labor always flourishes best when its wages are paid in coin. It is thus made the equal of capital. This has always been the doctrine of the Republican party. It is the true and only principle in prosperous trade and commerce. No business can flourish which is conducted on a system of credits. All paper currency is of the character of a debt on one side, and credit on the other, which always exist, until coin is produced in the transaction. To justify regulate honest labor, it must be paid in honest money. And for these reasons the laboring man must look to the Republican party.

The Tribune has the following just and pertinent remarks: "Candidates who don't care exactly what they think, or who don't dare to say it, can profitably take lessons of Col. Hoyt in his Pennsylvania campaign speeches. Colonel Hoyt is making a strong bid for Greenback votes, but he does it by showing the dishonor and disgrace into which a triumph of Greenback principles would plunge the country. Even as a matter of policy a manly and intrepid course is safer than paltering or faltering. Inscrupibly and cowardice are the poorest kind of weapons to make use of in a good cause."

In 1861 when Mr. DILL's neighbors were shouldering their muskets and marching forward to battle and death in defense of the old Union, he met in mass meeting with other copperheads and resolved that "This Union can never be maintained by force of arms." While DILL was doing this, General HENRY M. HOYT was marching to the front at the head of a regiment of patriotic Pennsylvanians. The old soldiers of the Keystone will make no mistake in November when they come to cast their ballots.

Several of the Democratic candidates base their feeble hopes of success on the efforts of treacherous Republicans, who are to be employed to work in their interest on the day of election. Look out for such men.

NOT A DEMOCRAT.

From Ohio the western faction of Republicanism, showing the assistance of the National Bank and United States notes, has been standing at the close of each fiscal year, from 1867 to 1877 inclusive. The statement was prepared at the Treasury Department, July 16, 1878, and is entirely reliable. By studying it many interesting facts appear, not the least of which is, that the purchasing power of the currency at the present time exceeds that of 1867 by more than One Hundred and Fifty Millions of Dollars. This and other facts therein contained, are a complete refutation of the innumerable incorrect assertions so persistently reiterated by the greenback reactionists.

Some of our Democratic friends who wouldn't even look at DIMMICK on his first visit, now declare him one of the best fellows in the world. They swear they never said anything about his "record." Some one has said that: "Vote for a man of such right mind. As to be hated, need not be; but not to see his name with his face, was a man's duty, and his duty." DIMMICK has enlisted FOYLE, and is making a feeble attempt to organize the distracted party in this county. No use, Mr. D., "your record," as the editor of the Argus says, is fast, and the people won't vote for you.

FOYLE is kept quite busy explaining how he happened to change his opinion in regard to DIMMICK so suddenly. Two weeks ago he refused to meet him. Now he is his chief flogger. But consistency doesn't trouble some people.

The friends of BECKER MORGAN boldly proclaim that MICHAEL WHITE, the Greenback candidate, is to be taken out of the field, and we have no doubt they will endeavor to create the impression on the day of election that he has withdrawn.

"OVERTON was right in working for an honest dollar," said a disgraced farmer, when he was politely informed by the Treasurer at the Fair that his trade dollar was only worth 90 cents.

JUDGE PARSONS SAYS DIMMICK'S record is just as good as the average Democrat's.
