Resolved, That the thanks of this Pomona Grange be extended to Sister AUGUSTA JONES, for her contribution of flowers and evergreens, that it seemed like the bride's bouquet, and that they were all boys and girls again—opened the festivities of the day by firing a salute in military style, which seemed to be the signal for the frolic to begin; and it did begin all day long without intermission until evening. Singing, croquet playing, extemporized concerts, everything that they thought would contribute to the enjoyment of the day, was indulged in with a zeal that was truly refreshing to witness. The refreshments for the occasion seemed to have been gotten up without any thought of expense or labor; everything that heart could wish, appetite crave or ingenuity invent was there to contribute to the enjoyment of the inner circle. The day was truly a grand one, and the thanks of the Grange are hereby tendered to all who participated in its success. The bride was attended in a white wedding dress, with white satin bodice, and trimmings of white lace and loopings of white satin ribbon. The best lady wore a dress of white swiss, with white lace and ribbon trimmings. The groom wore a dark suit, and his best man wore both in full evening dress. The interior of the handsome residence was beautifully adorned with evergreens and flowers, evincing exquisite taste on the part of the bride, who superintended their designing and arrangement. At the conclusion of the wedding ceremonies a splendid repast was partaken of by the guests present, after which the happy couple took the afternoon train for Elmira Falls and a trip through the Eastern States, where they will visit a number of the bride's relatives. The wishes of a host of friends are theirs for a life of prosperity and happiness.
