- - "Poor Tom 's a cold!" Good folks, I beg
 Your kind indulgence while I write,
 Notor the protoplasm or egg.
 But of the concrete creature, hight
 Sir Thomas Turkey. Once I road
 About a bird of fashion strange
 That dwelt in Bourbon, as 'its said,
 And may be had no wider range.
 - About that bird the wise men wrote,
 And quarreled sometimes, years ago,
 They always quarrel (make a note
 Of that, and say I told you so).
 - Some said the bird was struthious; some Declared it was a myth of fable,
 And others vowed by heaven's blue dome
 It once had graced the Bourbon table.
 - So, for a century the fight
 With varying fortunes dragged along;
 Each wise man vowed that he was right
 And hence that all the rest were wrong.
 In one thing each and all agreed—
 The wondrous creature was no more;
 But then, some bones remained, indeed,
 Upon a South Sea Island shure.
 - "But what of this?" I hear you say;
 Well, time, you know, makes all things plais
 I he had my doubts for many a day
 And truth that lingering doubt has slain.
 To him who wisely holds his peace,
 And has the faith to watch and wait, Time bringeth knowledge and increase. And solves all riddles soon or late.
 - And thus it chanced this very morn,
 While I my rose trees trussed with straw,
 A fewl proceeding came to warn
 And touch my wonder on the raw.
 This fewl proceeding did proceed
 To perch itself before my door;
 "I came," it said, "the poor to feed,
 But I shall feed, ah, nevermore!" And then the household gathered; round, Their wonder every moment grew, And every moment swelled the sound— "Oh let us see! do-do, do-do!".
 - "Enreka!" in my joy l cried;
 "Behold the extinct bugaboo!
 The missing link of Bourbon's pride—
 The great do-do, do-do, do-do!" Up spoke the mother of the flock—
 "Methinks 'lls turkey number two,
 And of the famous Bradford stock;
 I'll stuff and roat." Said f. "do-do!"
 "Do-do yourself!" the dame replied,
 "Your myths and riddles I pooh-pooh!
 I'll make this bird Thanksgiving's pride;"
 And all the household said "do-do!"
 - Good people, thanks. We know not why
 We have deserved this noble bird;
 If we have not deserved it, I
 Am thankful still to be preferred.
 For when this proud old Thomas came
 The wolf fied howling from our door;
 So may you grow in name and fame
 Biest aye in basket and in store.

 Ever in debt to you,
