THE Virginia ex-Confederates rebel rency. No party can sustain itself which trifles with the honest convictions of the people, by asserting that the continuance of such a make-shift is necessary for the prosperity of the country. The issue of legal-tenders was a necessity when we were involved in civil war, and though it was a measure of doubtful constitutionality, was acquiesced in because it was made necessary by the exigencies of the times. The necessity now having passed, the government should remedy the evil by withdrawing the greenbacks, and leaving the banking business of the country where it properly belongs, with the National Banks, and private bankers.

It is surprising that our Republican leaders do not recognize the public sentiment which so manifestly runs with the President and Secretary SHERMAN in this matter. Fifty Thousand Men in Line WITNESSED BY THREE QUARTERS | bitter in denuciation of his course, and OF A MILLION OF PEOPLE!

The reception which was given to Gen. GRANT to-day was the grandest display ever seen on this continent, and probably of modern times. The line was composed of at least 50,000 men, military, grand army posts, civic and beneficial associations, delegations from the manufacturing and industrial establishments, political clubs and citizens generally. Along the route of the procession the streets were packed with people, men, women and children, enthusiastic in their desire to honor the Great Chieftain, who appropriately ends his journey around the world at the city from whence he set out.
